Same War God, New Face
Red Petticoats. Good Meteor Showers
If Ten Men Had 10 Billions

By Arthur Brisbane

THE GOD OF WAR has changed his face, appearing now with a different kind of frown, eyes slanting upward at the corners. He is an Asiatic, but the same old god.

Japan says: "China attacked me, cruelly, wrongfully, when I wasn't doing anything at all."

China says: "That's the way the wolf talked to the baby lamb in the fable when he wanted an excuse to eat it. How could we Chinese attack Japan when we are so busy attacking each other?"

Russia says: "I am the one that is attacked. My feelings are hurt. The Japanese are trying to ruin my five-year plan. May the ghosts of Karl Marx and Lenin haunt and destroy them!"

When you hear of people being killed, they are usually Chinese, fifty here, a hundred there.

Gen. Mah, a Chinese, who seems most anxious to fight Japan, is said to have received 15 carloads of arms from Russia.

Russia will not get into a war if she can help it. She is busy, and feels like an Italian image vendor with 40 plaster statues on a board balanced on his head.

But Russia will fight if she must.

China was buying silver in London yesterday, probably getting ready to hire some more soldiers. You must pay them if they fight.

The Empress Eugenie hat is dead.

Too many ladies looking out of one eye, under the brim, killed that fashion. Women want to be "different." According to one fashion writer, red flannel petticoats, such as Eugenie wore, but shorter, of course, and tighter, will be fashionable for a while. That is good news. Women freezing themselves injure their vitality, starving themselves they reduce vitality. Starving AND freezing they can't stand.

Perhaps you didn't know that it is fashionable to have your toenails polished, and dyed a bright red, green or blue, wearing sandals without stockings, to make the toenails visible. That is fashionable, in certain places, and it is to continue. That's queer, but better than dyeing your teeth black. Some savage women do that.

The ancient Mayans believed that the meteors were falling hairs on the head of "The Lord of the Dead, Tzontamocque." We know them as heavy stones striking our atmosphere, melting because of their high speed, and usually harmless. We not insures against them, but one MIGHT destroy the biggest building on earth.

France is short, may find it necessary to import 50,000,000 bushels of wheat. Fortunately, she can pay for it easily. In the past week her gold supply was increased by three billion francs, taken from the United States. All those francs amount to only $117,250,000, but every little helps.

And as there is only ten and a half billion dollars' worth of gold in the world, our French friends may, eventually, get it all.

Concerning the world's inadequate supply of what we are pleased to call "real money," which 90 per cent of the world's people cannot possibly have any, it is interesting to reflect that three Americans, Mellon, Ford and Rockefeller, are probably each worth a billion. If they chose to demand gold, that would give each one a tenth of the world's total supply. Suppose ten men actually had it all. What then?

Reed Harris, editor of the Columbia University paper, "The Spectator," says, editorially, that football is largely professional and those that manage athletic funds are not willing to show their accounts.

To that, three young Columbia college football players reply convincingly. They tell the editor, "If you say anything like that again, three of us will beat you up."

Three good football players, in training, could probably keep the promise.

Paul Block, publisher, who owns all of several things, and a little of everything, has sold his baseball club, called The Newark International League Club to Col. Jacob Ruppert, who already owns the New York Yankees.

With this purchase, Col. Ruppert extends the baseball "chain store" field. Being new, that is news.

Government experts in Finland, investigating prohibition, recommend manufacture and sale of beer containing not more than 2.2 per cent of alcohol.

'GOUGE' AUTO RATE RUSHED INTO EFFECT

SOLONS GOT $400 EACH BUT DID NOTHING

Referendum Abolishing Zone System Planned to Go to Voters Next Fall

Today's developments in the legislative-auto insurance muddle, were as follows:

1—Announcement that the new rates would be promulgated tonight—increased 11 per cent over this year's rates.

2—Indication that a referendum for a flat auto insurance rate, ending the zone system, would be submitted to the people at the next election.

3—Reluctance of the legislators to tell what they will do with the $400 apiece voted themselves for services at the special session that accomplished nothing.

4—Discovery by a flabbergasted citizenry that it has paid legislators $139,126.50 to vote a $245,000 unemployment relief bill.

The Legislature having failed (in special session at a cost of $139,126.50) to provide an alternative, Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown will announce the 1932 increased compulsory auto insurance rates tonight.

He indicated today there would be little if any change in the rates from the tentative schedule that brought wails of protests from motorists on Sept. 1 and caused Gov. Ely to call the special session.

They will call for car owners to pay to the insurance companies next year a total of $23,500,000, an increase of $2,500,000 over this year's cost.

PLUS COMMISSIONS

Any chance that the commissioner himself would provide relief to some ones by promulgating a flat rate went glimmering with his statement that under law he is required to make classification according to hazards.

Nor did there appear any chance of eliminating the so-called acquisition costs, the 10 per cent of policy paid by the insurance company (but by the public indirectly) to the agents securing the policies.

This amounts to $8 in zones with an $80 maximum and only $1.60 in zones with a $16 maximum, but

They Grabbed Their $400 Apiece and Ran Away

THE SPECIAL SESSION of the Legislature was about the cheapest performance in the history of Massachusetts.

These "solons" (solons, the dictionary tells us, means wise men) were called by the Governor to relieve the automobile owners of the unjust and excessive insurance rates, which now amount to $21,000,000 annually, and to forestall an added gouge of $2,500,000 in 1932.

They adopted not a single measure designed or calculated to lessen the burdens of the automobile owners.

They did nothing to forestall the $2,500,000 increase.

And after seven weeks of idleness, listlessness and puny bickerings, they had the audacity to vote themselves $400 EXTRA SALARY with $800 apiece for the wealthy President of the Senate and Speaker of the House.

This extra salary amounts to $112,800. The extra expenses bring the total cost of the do-nothing session to $139,126.

What a spectacle! WITH IDLE MEN WALKING THE STREETS IN SEARCH OF WORK AND WOMEN AND CHILDREN LIVING ON SHORT RATIONS!

The unemployment they relieved was their own. They have pocketed their money and slunk away.

The State can consider itself LUCKY that they are gone.

If they had stayed in a few days longer they might have mustered up enough nerve to vote themselves another $112,800—which the people pay.

Davis Widow Drunk in 10 Minutes, Sister Says

By a Staff Correspondent

Salem, Nov. 13—It took Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis "only 10 or 15 minutes," to get so drunk she could hardly walk, her sister, Mrs. Ruth L. Frechette of Swampscott, testified today in Probate Court, where issues are being framed in an attempt by Mrs. Frechette to break her sister's will.

Mrs. Davis was also in the habit of soliciting "art" photographs, Mrs. Frechette declared, as well as in the habit of reading racy literature and telling stories and jokes that were "rather spicy."

Under examination by Atty. James W. Sullivan, her counsel, Mrs. Frechette testified:

"It was nothing uncommon for my sister to go upstairs in her home in Lynnfield, and come down 10 or 15 minutes later under the influence of liquor.

"She had to hold on to the railing when she came down. She was very unsteady."

DAVIS 'AT HOME' THESE

Howard Clark Davis, second husband of the woman who drowned last June on a midnight boating party in Lake Suntaug, adjoining her estate, was always "at home" at the then Mrs. John B. Pierce's estate even before Davis married her, Mrs. Frechette testified.

"I first saw Davis at my sister's home before they were married," the witness said. He was sitting in the sun parlor. At another time when I saw him there, he was sitting in a little room off my sister's bedroom.

"When he first arrived there he was very shabbily dressed, but as he continued to go there he looked more prosperous."

Q.—Did he take off his coat when he was there? A.—Yes. He acted as though he belonged there. The witness said her sister was married to Davis in the South, after she had built a winter home in Washington ave., Miami Beach, Fla.

Combined Forces From Siberia Sweep Down on Invaders in Manchuria

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)

Tientsin, China, Nov. 13 (AP)—A report in Russian circles today said a Communist brigade of Chinese, Koreans and Kuriats from Blagoveschensk, Siberia, surprised the Japanese troops at the Nonni river and threw them back sharply, taking several of their airplanes.

The Communist troops, marching from the north, swept into the highway near Taitsihar, the report said, and attacked with sweeping machine gun fire, demoralizing the Japanese forces in the Nonni region and forcing them to retreat several miles behind the bridgehead.

JAPS RENEW ATTACK.

Advancing under cover of artillery fire, Japanese cavalry launched a series of attacks on Chinese forces in the Taitsihar area, Gen. Mah Chan-Shan reported today.

The infantry did not come into action, but the fighting continued from yesterday afternoon until nightfall, with casualties on both sides.

KILLS HER LOVE IN RUM ROW

'I SHOT HIM IN A HAZE,' SOBS WIFE

Mansfield Society Mother and Banker's Son Fight to Death While Drunk

A tragedy of life, more ghastly than any she encountered in her study of drama, today gripped Emily Roberts Cobb, 26, of Mansfield, slayer of her husband.

Mrs. Cobb, former student at the Emerson College of Oratory, dramatic reader and dancer, is under guard at a Brockton hospital, where she raves incoherently of the shooting.

"I fired," she sobbed, "and the sound of the shot seemed to clear away the haze in which I had been moving."

She fired and then the haze cleared and she realized what she had done.

But it was too late, then, to do anything about it, for a charge of birdshot from a 12-guage gun had shot away Cobb's jaw.

They had been school sweethearts.

"And I helped him upstairs," she cried. "His face was bleeding terribly. I helped him into the kitchen. I don't remember much after that."

"HE HAD KNIFE"

She could not say what they had quarrelled about.

Their two children were there, unharmed, and crying.

"Justin struck me and knocked me down," said the young mother, "I got up and he hit me with his fists. We were in the kitchen and he grabbed a bread knife and struck at me with the flat side of it."

Then Cobb went down cellar. Perhaps to fix the heater, perhaps for more liquor. Liquor and empty bottles were found there today.

"I hunted up a shotgun he had in a closet and followed him, scarcely knowing what I was doing."

She didn't know what she was doing—in the haze. Haze of liquor and haze of anger.

"When I reached the cellar he was standing with his back to me, 10 feet away.

"As he turned, I fired—"

THEN IT'S TOO LATE

She helped him up the cellar stairs to the kitchen. She realized then what she had done. They had been sweethearts, childhood sweethearts. He was the father of her children. She could do something for him, perhaps.

He knelt on the kitchen floor,

HARVARD BARS 'TED' HUSING

Doing some announcing itself Harvard announced today that Ted Husing, chief sports announcer for the Columbia Broadcasting System, will do no more announcing of football games from the Harvard Stadium.

Husing, who admits having told countless listeners over the air on Saturday that Barry Wood's playing in the Harvard-Dartmouth game was "putrid," will also be complained of officially by Harvard authorities to William Paley, head of the Columbia system.

"I don't think anyone speaking over the air has a right to refer to any boy of any team on the field as 'putrid,'" said Bill Bingham, athletic director at Harvard, today.

"Furthermore, since this man Husing has admitted having made the uncalled for remark, let it be emphatically stated as coming from me that he will never again be admitted to the Harvard Stadium for the purpose of broadcasting a football contest."

Bingham declared he believed Husing on Saturday to have been smarting under the refusal of Football Coach Eddie Casey to outline Harvard's secret trick plays to the announcer before the Harvard-Army game two weeks ago.

I. TUCKER BURR AND WIFE HURT

I. Tucker Burr, prominent Boston banker, and his wife, Mrs. Alice M. Burr, were injured today when they were struck by an automobile while crossing Commonwealth ave. near their town house.

They were taken to their home, 159 Comonwealth ave., by Nathan Rothenberg of Babcock st., Brookline, driver of the car which hit them, where Dr. Frederick Winslow of Clarendon st. examined them.

Mr. Burr, who is 73, suffered concussion of the brain and cuts on the head and body. Mrs. Burr, who is about her husband's age, was cut about the legs and face.

Burr is the head of the firm of Burr, Gannett & Co., investment bankers, a director of the Edison Illuminating Co and the Nashawena Mills, and a trustee of Crocker, Burbank & Co.

His family have been influential in Boston banking circles for decades, and a son, I. Tucker Burr, Jr., is now associated with his father's firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Burr will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next October.

Two Found Shot Dead Near Auto

Berlin, N. H., Nov. 13—The bodies of two local men, mysteriously shot to death, were found beside their automobile in Thirteen Mile woods some 17 miles from this town today.

They were Amadie Le Pointe and Leo Burns, residents of Berlin for several years.

The bodies were discovered by a passing motorist and police immediately started an investigation.

It was reported that no weapons were found at the scene, and police were trying to determine if the men were shot in a rum-runners' feud.

As far as could be learned neither LePointe nor Burns had been seen in Berlin for 24 hours.

He also suggested powdered coal could be brought in this manner to the consumer's furnace.

GIRL ROBBED OF $1000 PAYROLL

Three gunmen fled with a payroll of $1000 today after holding up Miss Marie Klabe, 21, cashier at the Lincoln Iron Foundry, 191 Old Colony ave., South Boston.

They entered the cashier's office on the second floor of the building within a few minutes after a bank car of the State Street Trust Co. delivered the payroll money to the girl.

With guns pointed at her heart, she was forced to gather up the bills she had started to sort out for the pay envelopes.

"Fork it all over!" one of the gunmen demanded.

The girl did so and the three raced down the stairs to a waiting automobile. This machine bore number plates of a Worcester owner. The alarm was flashed to that city and while Worcester police went to his house, state officers took up the watch on highways between Boston and Worcester. Police said the car may have been stolen.

One of the holdup men wore smoked glasses, Miss Klabe said. In a similar robbery on Bennett st., South End, about a month ago, one of the gunmen also wore smoked glasses.

One of the robbers, she said, had a long scar running from his right ear to his right eye and the same side of his face was badly bruised. Another was short and stocky and about 30 years old.

GIRL'S ENIGMA: LOYAL TO DEAD LOVE OR TO KIN?

TRIAL TO PROVE IF BLOOD TIE IS THICKER

Rose Allen, Like "Coquette" in Play, Must Make Great Decision Over Brother

By DOROTHY DUCAS

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 13 (INS)—The spiritual struggles of a character out of a play have become real for Rose E. W. Allen.

The pretty debutante, whose brother, Edward H. B. Allen, killed her sweetheart, Francis A. Donaldson, 3d, is facing today the problem of "Coquette."

Friends are remarking on the similarity of the stage situation and Rose Allen's actual dilemma.

Both Rose and "Coquette" are confronted with the task of choosing between the living and the dead.

It is Rose's brother who has snuffed out the life of the man she loved; while in the famous play it is the father, but little did Rose think when she saw the drama several years ago that she would find herself in a comparable predicament.

MUST DECIDE TODAY

"Coquette" took the easy, dramatic way out of that playwright's misery for emotional actresses. For Rose it is harder. There must be a decision, and Rose must decide today.

Following the hearing young Allen was held for the grand jury on a first degree murder charge.

Today the machinery of justice was set in motion in the little city of Norristown, Pa., where a country coroner held an inquest. Rose was invited to attend but she was not obliged to do so under the law.

There was still that answer to her problem to be found; shall she come to the defense of a murderer who did his deed out of love for her and chagrin for her lost virtue? Or shall she continue to support the memory of the beloved victim, who her father says betrayed her?

WAITS FOR SUITOR

Without her own mind at peace on her course of action, Rose Allen hesitates to put herself under public scrutiny.

She has passed a most troublous 24 hours since her father gave his amazing account of her affair with Donaldson. At first she did not realize that he had revealed all, in a frantic effort to save Biddie, the son, from the electric chair.

When she learned that the world had been told of her betrayal in Scranton, Pa., last August, it was a shock. A physician was summoned yesterday afternoon to attend her.

Rumors that she had left the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pearce, where her father is also staying, were circulated. But she still was there this morning, thinking, pondering, refusing to eat.

She learned of her slain suitor's funeral, and the hot tears of her grief caught in her throat. His body had been laid into the frosty turned earth without his sweetheart's presence at the grave.

But, secluded in the luxurious home of her society friends, Rose Allen still hesitated to forgive her family, upon whom she has laid the blame for Donaldson's death from the start.

Allen Hit Victim Before He Shot, Says Witness

Norristown, Pa., Nov. 13 (AP)—Testimony was given at the inquest today that Edwin H. B. Allen struck Francis A. Donaldson, 3d, with his fist twice before Donaldson struck back prior to the shooting of Donaldson by Allen in the Green Hill Farms Hotel last Monday night.

This testimony was given by Albert Gallatin H. Lucas, friend of Donaldson, 24-year-old society man. Lucas, who accompanied Donaldson to the Allen apartment in the hotel, was the only eyewitness of the shooting.

Allen, who is 23, was not present at the inquest, nor was is 18-year-old sister, Rose E. W. Allen, whose love affair with Donaldson, her father said, was the underlying cause for the killing.

HOODED BAND WHIPS 'RED' SUSPECTS

One Victim of the Attack Says Michigan Vigilantes Wore Police Coats

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 13 (AP)—At least three men were flogged by Vigilantes here last night because they were suspected of being Communist sympathizers.

One of them was quoted as saying he heard the screams of a woman who apparently was receiving the same treatment, but no woman was reported missing, and the belief was expressed that if one were present she was a member of the Vigilante band.

HEARD WOMAN SCREAM

Authorities, who said the whippings probably were in the aftermath of a recent unemployment demonstration in which more than a score of persons were arrested after a brush with officers were investigating to learn if others had been seized.

Walter Hardin, Clarence Sherman and Leo Forth were back at their homes today, bearing marks of beatings. It was Hardin who said he heard a woman screaming nearby as his captors beat him with the butt of a pistol. He said he would recognize his assailants, although they were hooded.

Mike Stykoff, 38, also who was abducted as he was leaving a meeting, but said he was released without mistreatment when he convinced his kidnapers he was not a Communist.

WORE POLICE COATS

Sherman, who has been a leader in a movement for increased relief allotments for unemployed, said he believed the men who took him from his home were policemen. At police headquarters, however, it was denied that members of the department had participated. Assurance was given that policemen not on duty last night would be questioned.

"The men wore police rain coats," Sherman said, "and one of them pulled a gun in my ribs when they took me from my home."

WORK FOR POOR MAIN ISSUE OF DEMOCRATS

Ritchie Makes Announcement After Long Session With Smith and Raskob

New York, Nov. 13 (US)—Following an extended conference with John J. Raskob and former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Albert C. Ritchie, Governor of Maryland, announced that unemployment would be the paramount issue of the national Democratic campaign in 1932.

Far two and a half hours last night the Maryland governor sat closeted with the national chairman and Smith. At the conclusion of the huddle Ritchie denied that candidates were discussed, but added:

DISCUSSED PROGRAM

"We discussed the 1932 program at length, and decided that every effort will be made to build a plank that will eventually bring relief to the country's unemployed. Once is was prohibition—an important issue, too —but conditions of the poor come first."

Ritchie, frequently mentioned as probable presidential timber, frankly admitted that were the candidacy offered him he would willingly accept it, adding:

"I'd be very glad to take it."

Asked about the plans for Democratic harmony in general, he said:

SEES GREAT CHANCE

"This seems to me the greatest opportunity we have had in a decade to put our man in Washington. There are at least five or six good Democrats who could be elected. I'm for any one of them. There are not going to be any sectional or factional differences to impede solidarity. I assure you of that."

Ritchie flatly denounced any attempt to cancel war debts, saying to do so would shift the financial burden from the shoulders of Europe to those of American taxpayers. He added, however, that perhaps the moratorium is unavoidable.

fell forward on his hands so the blood flowing from where his jaw had been would not run down his throat, and choke him. She cried, and held bandages to the wound. Finally, she held a bed spread there.

She held a bed-spread there and after a while she screamed.

She was screaming, holding the bedspread to his face, and Cobb was wavering on his hands and knees, and the children were in one corner of the room, crying—Justin, 3d, four, and Justine, a year and a half.

And George F. Roberts of Mansfield, Mrs. Cobb's father, walked into the house to see his grandchildren.

Cobb lost a dramatic race for life in which he rode crouched on hands and knees on the floor of a careening police ambulance to prevent suffocation by the blood that flowed from gunshot wounds in his head and neck.

Mrs. Cobb, taken to the Ducy Hospital, Brockton, with cuts on her head and face and a deep wound at the base of her neck, remained conscious all night after gasping a brief story of the tragedy to Police Chief Vickery of Mansfield.

SOBS STORY OF TRAGEDY

Chief Vickery today transmitted to the district attorney his report of the crime, from which the tragedy may be reconstructed, according to the police version of Mrs. Cobb's statement.

The young couple, both widely known in Mansfield and happily married in the general belief of their numerous friends, started drinking together early in the day and carried on until late afternoon, when the quarrel developed from some cause not yet made clear.

The rest was told by Roberts, a salesman for a Boston dry goods firm.

Roberts said he stopped at the Cobb home, which is on the second floor of a two-family house in st., and mounted the stairs.

In the kitchen he found Cobb on his hands and knees, bleeding profusely, while his wife, her eyes swollen almost shut and also bleeding from a cut at the back of her neck, trying blindly to staunch her husband's wounds.

Roberts called Dr. F. S. Griffin, the family physician, who in turn notified police and summoned an ambulance.

The racing ride to Boston with the dying man followed, with a policeman at the wheel of the ambulance and a police motorcycle escort clearing the way.

Surgeons operated immediately on Cobb's arrival, but their efforts to save his life were futile.

Italy's Premier

Helen Flaherty, was a graduate of the Mansfield High School, as was her husband, and later attended the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston, after which she had a short career as a dramatic reader and dancer, appearing in several New England cities.

Cobb, junior member of the firm of F. M. and J. L. Cobb, manufacturing jewelers, attended Peddie Institute, a New Jersey military academy, after leaving high school, and gained some note as an athlete.

MAINE PRISON STRIKE BALKED

Augusta, Me., Nov. 13—State police, deputy sheriffs and prison guards were called today to Kennebec County jail to quell an impending riot, when 45 prisoners went on strike against work on the rock pile.

The strike was of short duration, the prisoners returning to their labors after prison routine was upset for two hours.

Sheriff Willis B. Crosby first noticed dissension among the prisoners as a gang of 58 reported to the rock pile. Eleven went to work and the others took a defiant attitude.

"It's too cold to work," the 45 told Sheriff Crosby when he ordered them to start.

When arguments availed him nothing, Sheriff Crosby called seven deputy sheriffs and six state troopers.

Faced with the guards and possible sentences to solitary, the prisoners then returned to their work.

Sheriff Crosby named the ringleaders in the strike as Paul Thibodeau and Joseph Gerard, both of Augusta, and Thomas Quirion of Bath. All three are serving terms for liquor offenses.

'KEY MEN' WILL GUARD GRANDI

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—The man who sweeps the hallway, cleans the windows or carelessly leans against a convenient wall when Dino Grandi arrives in the United States may do so with a very definite purpose in mind.

He may be one of the key men selected to protect the Italian foreign minister while on his visit to America. From the time the minister walks down the gangplank of the vessel landing him in New York next Monday until he boards a ship to go home he is in the hands of the Washington government.

It is an international rule that the government acting as host and not the individual guest of his own government, is charged with the responsibility of his protection.

When Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain and, more recently, Premier Laval of France, came to Washington for conversations with President Hoover, every possible precaution was taken to safeguard them, without interference with their personal desires.

FUND TO GIVE JOBS URGED

A fund to provide work for those in need who have not applied for public aid was advocated by Richard K. Conant, commissioner of public welfare, in addressing the Lawrence Men's Club at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul last night.

"To provide adequate relief for those who apply to the public welfare department is not enough, even though we provide some work, along with the aid," he said. "We should not force people to apply for aid in order to get a job. The experience of many cities has now demonstrated effective ways in which citizens' committees can provide employment and pay the wages from funds raised by public subscription.

"Every city and town in the state which has an unemployment problem should form such a committee. The employment problem should be kept separate from the work which the public welfare department is providing for people who are receiving aid, and the applications for it should be made at a separate office.

"Many firms and employers are able to make voluntary contributions and a citizens' committee can call upon those who are well above the poverty line to contribute for a special fund to provide work."

hol, and wines of 12 per cent maximum.

Those who believe that men were not meant to drink water only will approve that suggestion—3.2 per cent beer would not be intoxicating unless you drank several quarts of it.

Twelve per cent wine would bar champagne, and heavy natural wines along with the sherry, and encourage the lighter natural wines.

But nothing like that will come in this country for many a day.

"Bath-tub gin," "needled beer" and "prune juice" whiskey must satisfy the thirsty for a long time to come.

TORTURE GIRL'S MOTHER GONE

Keene, N. H., Nov. 13—After a few brief days of sunshine, shadows seemed destined today to again enter the life of Irene Pasno, the little torture victim abanoned in Rutland, Vt., after being brutally maltreated.

As the child looked forward eagerly to the arrival from Florida of her foster-mother, Mrs. Edward Pasno, it was learned the woman is mysteriously missing.

It was revealed that Mrs. Pasno, last heard from in Jacksonville, Fla., is a Gold Star mother, whose son, Charles L. Brooks, issue of a first marriage, was killed in France during the World War.

Her husband and members of her family are equally ignorant of her whereabouts, it was revealed.

The husband, who legally adopted Irene five years ago, has asked to be given the child, but he is out of work and staying in the home of a brother who has a large family.

As a result, Mrs. Jennie B. Powers, state welfare agent in whose care Irene has been placed, will confer today with County Solicitor Arthur Olson and City Solicitor Henry Arwe regarding the child's future.

Film Stars on Radio Program for Jobless

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 13 (US)—Hollywood will assist in a big way Sunday night's radio "Parade of Stars" for the motion picture industry's aid of unemployment relief.

From Hollywood the following stars will be heard over the two coast-to-coast networks: Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore, Maurice Chevalier, George Arliss, John Boles, Irene Dunn, Tom Mix, Ann Harding, Bebe Daniels and Jeanette MacDonald.

LORD MAY GET BELDEN'S POST

Melvin E. Lord, 23, Harvard graduate and director of the University of Iowa libraries, is being considered as successor to the late Charles Belden, librarian of the Boston Public Library.

Despite his comparative youth, Lord has an international reputation as a librarian. For five years he was librarian at the American Academy in Rome.

Three years ago he assisted in instituting the re-catalouguing of the Vatican Library. Before going to Rome he was on the staff of the Harvard University library, part of the time as librarian at the Harvard Union.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Lord, of Lynn, he was married three years ago to Miss Rosamond Lane, daughter of the late William C. Lane of Boxford and Cambridge.

FIRE AND FUMES DRIVE OUT 350 IN BACK BAY AND BRIGHTON

'Bat Baby's' Sister Reveals 8 Years of Horror and Misery

HOTEL GUESTS ROUTED BY FLAMES

Fifty Occupants of Apartment House Leave When Refrigerator Plant Pipe Bursts

More than 300 guests of a Back Bay apartment hotel fled a fire there early today and at the same time 50 persons were routed from a Brighton apartment by fumes leaking, police say, from the building refrigerating plant.

The Back Bay fire, in the exclusive Myles Standish apartment hotel, at Beacon st. and Bay State rd., was in the suite occupied by Joseph Work, prominent in Masonic activities. The blaze was confined to the second floor suite, although all the guests, many scantily clad, fled from the building. Damage was estimated at $1500.

FIRE QUICKLY CHECKED

In Brighton, police responded to several phone calls from the building at 8 Ransom rd., and found 15 families aroused by fumes, spreading through the dwelling. Police traced the fumes to a leak in the apartment refrigerating system, they said.

The Myles Standish fire broke out an hour after a small party had ended in the Work suite. Work was absent at the time, having left to escort his guests to their homes.

The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Frances Fitzgerald, wife of the hotel engineer. She smelled smoke while walking along the second floor corridor and notified the clerk on duty at the desk.

Other guests were aroused by the smell of smoke and the clamor of fire apparatus arriving at the scene. All fled from the building many not even throwing coats over their scanty nightclothing.

Firemen quickly located the blaze and confined it to Work's suite. Damages were confined for the most part to furniture.

The Brighton apartment began filling with sulphur dioxide fumes at an early hour today. Several residents were aroused by the fumes and telephoned police at the Brighton station for aid.

A detail of police was despatched to the scene. They found 15 families in the building, including a number of children. All, clad in nightclothing, had fled to the street and were awaiting aid.

The officers assured the families there was no danger and the damage would be repaired immediately and induced them to return to their various suites.

Among the families who fled from the building were those of William A. Ford, John Frasier, Francis Gillis, G. A. Ell, David O'Leary, Samuel Rosoff and David Silver. Misses Bertha Golden, Lois A. Leis and Gertrude M. McLean also sought safety.

SON KILLED FOR HONOR

BEATEN, COWED BY A 'BRUTAL' STEPMOTHER

Gifts, Money, Letters of Sympathy and Offers of Homes Pour in on Pitiful Victim

By MARGARET LANE
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 13 (INS)—Louise Riley, the "Bat Baby's" elder sister, revealed today for the first time the full story of the maniacal cruelty which she said she, her brother, Francis, and her baby sister, Edith, suffered at the hands of their father and stepmother for eight nightmare years.

The story of little Edith Riley, her body shrunk and her mind darkened by four years' alleged abuse and starvation in a dark and airless cupboard, has horrified the whole country.

What has not been revealed is the whole tale of childish suffering that the brother and two sisters say they endured, ever since their father, Harry Riley, married a second time, and the three children were taken from their grandmother's care. The wicked stepmother of the fairy tales never behaved with such unexplained brutality as that with which the three children charge the second Mrs. Riley.

GIFTS POUR IN.

While the sister was telling her story, scores of letters and gifts began pouring into Gallinger hospital here from all over the country for Edith.

Mothers, fathers, young married couples and even children have written sympathetic letters, sent money, gifts and offers of a home.

The mutilated little girl was improving fast under the care of physicians in Gallinger Hospital, but officials decided to defer any thorough mental examination until later.

They declared such an examination would offer more productive results when the child has received the benefits of some weeks of care and her mind has been given a

CRIMSON RAPS 'SPECTATOR'

The Columbia "Spectator," student publication at the New York University, made a mistake in hurling general charges of professionalism in college football, in the opinion of the Harvard Crimson, in an editorial today entitled "Roar, Lion, Roar."

But from the action of Capt. Ralph Hewitt in invading the Spectator offices and threatening to whip the editor, the Crimson draws the inference that "some of the Spectator's wild seeds fell on fertile ground and produced thorns."

"One almost hesitates to ask whether the Spectator ever heard of the Carnegie report," says the Crimson editorial, in part.

"Evils, if they exist, must be attacked again and again, but there is no need for medes crying in the wilderness. The Spectator suspects that the Columbia athletic budget was not legitimate and moreover it was never made public. Here was the specific instance which should have been criticized.

"It is difficult to see the reason for either the Spectator's comment or Capt. Hewitt's ungentlemanly conduct."

GIRL, 10, VICTIM OF AUTO, DIES

A ray of bright sunshine entered the life of 10-year-old Marion Gallini yesterday. She had a new kitten.

Today she is dead.

An auto struck her on Eastern ave., Chelsea, as she hurried toward home with her pet, at the same time looking around for a box for the kitten's bed.

Her father, Mario Gallini of Spencer ave., Chelsea, thrice gave his blood during the night at Chelsea Memorial Hospital, but the child died today.

The automobile which struck her was driven, according to police, by Miss Hanna Sandler of Nanant ave., Revere.

PETTING PARTY ENDS IN DEATH

Worcester, Nov. 13—An orgy of gin, petting and incendiarism ended early today in Coes Pond with death to one youth and injury to another.

Albert Collette, 23, of Irving st., was drowned when his car plunged into 40 feet of water, and Albert Moquis, 26, of Pleasant st., reached shore after a struggle.

"Alice" and "Mary," flapper companions of two soda clerks, missed a similar fate by barely an hour because they left the automobile of the clerks' before it raced down a dead-end street and plunged into 40 feet of water.

Before the plunge, according to police, the clerks and their girls were seen near the scene of four incendiary fires.

He was taken to City Hospital, even as police sought him for questioning on the incendiary fires, because of his registration reported by pedestrians.

Questioned at the hospital, police said Moquis told of fancy with the girls but refused to talk when he was questioned about the fires.

He carefully shielded the family names of the girls, but admitted that one was taken home to Highland st. and the other to Lincoln st.

BRANDEIS 75 YEARS OLD

Massachusetts today is paying a notable tribute to one of its most illustrious sons, Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court, who is observing his 75th birthday.

Messages of felicitation from all parts of the country poured in upon the jurist in Washington, but the tribute from the Bay State and particularly from Boston voiced the pride which his neighbors feel in the justice's achievements.

Governor Ely's message was as follows:

"It is a pleasure to congratulate Mr. Justice Louis D. Brandeis on the occasion of his 75th birthday. He has devoted his life to study, conference and writing. He has occupied his position on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States with patience and gravity. He has created good precedents as well as following them. His wise use and application of the law brings out the fact that the power to do good is the true end of inspiration."

BLUEBEARD N. E. VISITS TOLD

Northboro, Nov. 13—Mrs. Charles Fleming, sister of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke Powers, one of the alleged victims of Harry F. Powers, the West Virginia Bluebeard, revealed today that she has sent a sworn statement to Clarksburg, for use at his trial.

The trial is scheduled to start next Tuesday, and Mrs. Fleming said she was willing to go there to testify, but so far had been asked only for the deposition.

In it she tells of the meeting of Powers and her sister and how he acted during visits to the Fleming home. Dorothy Lemke Powers was the fifth victim of the modern Bluebeard, and before leaving here with him she drew several thousand dollars from Worcester banks.

GANDHI QUITS PARLEY HOPES

London, Nov. 13 (INS)—Having abandoned hope of success for the Indian round table conference, Mahatman M. K. Gandhi will sail for Indian from Genoa on Nov. 29 to resume his passive resistance campaign against British rule.

This was announced today by his son, Devidas Gandhi, following a statement by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald indicating that failure of the minorities committee of the conference to reach an agreement on communal questions virtually seals the parley's doom.

In a final attempt to reconcile Hindus and Moslems, Gandhi conferred with the Aga Khan, Moslem leader, and was expected to talk with Lor Irwin, former viceroy of India, through whose efforts Gandhi was brought into the conference.

GOV. ELY WILL PROBE MANIAC MURDER

Gov. Ely was expected to take a hand today in the investigation of the murder of Irene Bamforth, 13, by her insane father, George Mamforth, at the Bridgewater State Farm Wednesday.

It is understood the Governor will seek to learn the reason why many inmates of the institution, criminally insane, were permitted to handle hammers and other tools without proper supervision.

The Governor's inquiry was expected to result in new regulations designed to prevent a repetition of the slaying of the Bamforth girl, beaten to death with a hammer by her maniac father.

Entrance of Gov. Ely into the case will raise the number of prospective probes to four, although State Commissioner of Corrections A. Warren Stearns has exonerated Bridgewater officials.

He said the killing was unavoidable, but failed to state whether preventative measures would be taken against similar tragedies.

WILBAR PUSHES PROBE

Meanwhile Dist. Atty. Winfield Wilbar announced his office would continue its probe into the slaying. He said thus far no criminal negligence had been uncovered. He added that a first degree murder indictment would be sought against Bamforth, if it was proved he killed his daughter during a lucid period.

Frank G. Bamforth, uncle and guardian of the slain girl, is also seeking a separate inquiry into her death. He conferred with attorneys yesterday regarding the proper steps toward instituting such a probe.

In addition two orders were filed calling for a complete investigation of the slaying and conditions at the farm by the Legislature. The orders were filed by Reps. John J. Reardon, of South Boston, and Roland D. Sawyer, of Ware.

Dr. Stearns' probe revealed Bamforth had a fine record for behavior and was not carefully watched. He said that Supt. Hanson informed him that Bamforth had received the hammer, with which he killed the girl, to perform his duties about the farm.

TOOLS AVAILABLE TO 300

Nearly 300 "model" prisoners, or trusties, are allowed access to tools such as hammers, screw drivers, brooms, pails and mops, Supt. Hanson disclosed.

Of this number between 25 and 30 are men who were committed there because of murders. All of the latter committed murders more than 20 or 30 years ago, he pointed out, and have shown good records since.

The trusties take care of their rooms, using hammers and other tools when they are required.

A guard watches them take the tools, but makes no record of those who take them or what tools are taken.

At night, a guard visits each one and asks if any tools are in their rooms. Negative replies mean that the guard makes no further check but relies on the honesty of the inmate.

In February, 1928, Eugene Amlaw, 61, a night supervisor, and William Gerrior, 44, a night watchman, were killed with the leg of an iron bed when five inmates escaped from their cells.

George Johnson, John C. Harrington and Michael T. Mullen were beaten during the affray.

A year later inmates ruined the dining hall during a riot that was caused by servings of corned beef on Good Friday.

Officials said the beef was served because many of the inmates deliberately spilled fish chowder that was served.

RECENT SHAKEUPS

Of more recent concern at the farm was the removal last summer of Supt. Henry Strann by order of Governor Ely.

The removal came as an aftermath of irregularities and laxity charged against the administration.

At intervals for the past 20 years, escapes, attempted escapes, charges of brutality, grand jury probes, charges of dope traffic and at least one incendiary fire have been visited upon the institution.

In July, 1930, Lloyd Kingdon, an inmate, was killed, and three attendants were stabbed. Kingdon and another prisoner secured knives in the dining hall, investigation showed.

He died by a guard's bullet as he fled across the yard after slashing the three attendants.

In 1913 the farm went under investigation to determine how a group of insane inmates hid a ladder under a 20-foot wall, preparatory to an attempt at escape.

Three months after that probe, five inmates succeeded in getting away by tunneling under a wall.

WIDOW GOT DRUNK FAST

down one day and she started to be argumentative, yet she didn't seem to be drunk. Finally she started to shake me. She became in a fighting mood. That was in 1918 or 1919. On that occasion she shook me and said, "What's the matter?" It upset me very much. She got up and sort of floated down the stairs and got in the machine and went home. Similar things happened several times and when she walked she seemed to skip.

The witness testified to another incident she said occurred in 1929.

"I asked my sister if she would like to go to my son's graduation at Swampscott high school," said Mrs. Frechette. "We made arrangements for her to arrive at my house at 6 p. m. She arrived at 7:40. She was in the back of the car with Editha (Mrs. Davis' ward and the "Cinderella Girl" in the case) and Miss Anita Court.

COULDN'T GET OUT OF CAR.

"I got into the car with my husband, and Mrs. Davis at that time looked as though she was pretty drunk. It was only five or eight minutes' drive to the graduation hall and my sister was so drunk she could not get out of the car without assistance.

"She finally straggled into the hall. My husband and I preceded and took our places, but Mrs. Davis and Editha got into the wrong seats and Mrs. Davis created quite a commotion.

"She would not move for anybody. The superintendent of schools came in and so did the principal, but they couldn't do anything with her. Finally a policeman was called and tried to put her out.

"I saw what was happening and went over to the policeman and said: 'Don't arrest her. I'll take care of her.'

BARRED FROM BATHROOM.

"When she got out of the hall she started to tell everybody who she was. She nearly fell down the stairs going out. She went home in a taxi."

On several occasions, according to Mrs. Frechette's testimony, her sister instructed her not to go into Mrs. Davis' private bathroom in the Lynnfield house.

Mrs. Frechette did go into the bathroom, she said, and saw there a gallon jug of whiskey.

Frequently, the witness declared, Mrs. Davis would make appointments and never appear to keep them.

"I don't know whether it was poor memory or that she was just queer," Mrs. Frechette said. At one time she gave Great-Aunt Julia, who brought us up, a Christmas gift of some books, and then Mrs. Davis called a couple of weeks later and said, 'Can I have those books?'

TOOK BOOKS BACK

"Aunt Julia said, 'What books?' My sister said, 'The books I brought out Christmas.' My aunt seemed surprised, but she gave back the books."

Q.—Do you recall that she arranged for people to come to dinner and was drunk at the time the dinner was supposed to be served? A.—Yes sir.

Q.—Did you see anything besides whiskey about the house in the way of hard liquors? A.—Yes, gin.

Mrs. Frechette said she also saw a bottle labeled "veronol," but never personally saw her sister take veronol.

Q.—Do you know what she read? A.—Yes . . . she read Le Vie Parisienne and magazines containing Parisian stories.

Q.—Have you seen her with pictures of this kind? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—More than once? A.—Yes, sir.

LAWYER "WISECRACKS"

Q.—Did she tell you where she got them? A.—Yes, sir.

Attorney Sullivan turned to Attorney Charles Bucknam of Lynn, counsel for the estate, and said:

"The rules require me to let you in on this, but I don't want to corrupt you."

Attorney Sullivan tossed the photograph down on the counsel table in front of Bucknam, but Bucknam brushed it aside.

Cambridge Trolleys Tied Up 15 Minutes

Hundreds of Boston Elevated commuters in Cambridge, Arlington and Medford were delayed more than 15 minutes this morning when a steam shovel pulled down a telephone wire in Medford st., near Massachusetts ave., Arlington.

Power was shut off on three main lines while the truck was repaired: Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, to Harvard Square; North Cambridge to Harvard Square; and Porter Square to Arlington. This latter shut-down also stopped the Arlington Heights-Harvard and Medford Hillside-Arlington Center runs.

JAPS ROUTED BY CHINESE

mander's demand that Tsitsihar be evacuated by midnight.

ARRANGED FOR HELP

The Daily News, a Japanese paper published at Dairen, Manchuria, a few days ago said Gen. Mah Chang-Shan visited Blagovescensk and arranged for help from the Soviet Government there, returning accompanied by Communist officers and a guard of 600 Communist troops.

It followed this up by saying, in its next issue, that an entire eastern Communist brigade was established on the Nonni front and that the Chinese authorities had agreed to the establishment of a Soviet policy in the zone of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The agreement, it was said, called for the deportation of "white" Russians and the recognition of Communist unions in Harbin.

Battle Follows Japanese Ultimatum to Gen. Mah

Peiping, Nov. 13 (INS)—Fighting between Japanese and Chinese troops south of Anganchi followed the presentation to Gen. Mah Chang-Shan of a written Japanese ultimatum demanding the immediate evacuation of Tsitsihar, Marsha' Chang Hsueh-Liang, governor of Manchuria, was advised today.

Gen. Mah reported by telegraph to Chang Hsueh-Liang's headquarters here that Gen. Honjo, Japanese commander at Mukden, had advised him that the Japanese intended to occupy Anganchi without further delay in order to protect the Taonan-Anganchi railroad.

"When I received the last Japanese ultimatum," Gen. Mah wired, "I demanded evidence that Gen. Honjo had the right to declare war against the Chinese government, and if he was acting officially on behalf of the Tokio government.

"Numerous Japanese have been coming to me (in Tsitsihar) during the past week and advising me to resign my command and leave, but I have been unable to learn if they were official government representatives, so I have refused to accept any ultimatums and will stay here to fight."

Chinese Cavalry Hits Japanese Right Wing

(Copyrighted, 1931, by the Associated Press)

Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 13 (AP)—The Japanese military intelligence bureau reported today that a large force of Chinese cavalry has practically enveloped the Japanese right wing in a battle at the Nonni River and that the Japanese position and communications are seriously endangered.

Japanese headquarters said that their detachment had not yet been reinforced, however, although four infantry companies are held in readiness at Chengchiatun.

Meanwhile additional Chinese troops have been arriving in the Tsitsihar region and the Japanese claim to have intercepted orders from Gen. Mah instructing one of his cavalry commanders to attack at Taonan to cut off the railway and prevent further supplies reaching the Japanese.

BANDITS ACTIVE

The Japanese also said they had a report bandits are harrying the countryside around Hsinmintun, causing 20,000 refugees to seek safety within the city and that other bandit gangs, some carrying banners proclaiming themselves "Volunteer Defenders of the Northeastern Frontier," have been reported around Kaiyuan, Changchun and Kirin and along the Mukden-Antung Railway.

5 N. E. Priests, 2 Nuns in Chinese War Zone

Five priests and two nuns from New England were reported today in the Manchurian area, administering to war refugees in spite of danger to themselves.

Rev. William R. Killion of Dorchester, Rev. Silvio R. Gilbert of Worcester, Rev. Albert Murphy of Springfield, Rev. Thomas Quirk of Manchester N. H. and Rev. Joseph R. Sweeney of New Britain, Ct., are the New England priests.

Sister Veronica, the former Marie Carney of Somerville, and Sister St. Anne Sexton of Framingham, are the nuns assigned there.

New "Dawes Plan" Expected for the Sino-Japanese Crisis

Geneva, Nov. 13 (INS)—Growing conviction that a new "Dawes plan" for solution of the dangerous Sino-Japanese problem in Manchuria—rests in the pocket of America's ambassador to Great Britain, was expressed in league circles here today.

Optimism prevailed with the departure of Ambassador Dawes from London for Paris to be on hand during the League council meeting which starts Monday.

POLICE FIRE 7 SHOTS IN CHASE

Two youths are under arrest in Cambridge today following a chase in which seven shots were fired by policemen and one man plunged into a canal to avoid capture.

They gave their names as Andrew J. Banfield, 17, of Hill st., Charlestown, and Joseph Kelley, 22, of Walnut rd, Somerville.

Police say that the two youths, with one other, stole an automobile in Somerville, just over the Cambridge line. They were seen, it is charged, speeding down Gore st., Cambridge, and were chased by Officer John F. Teehan in a commandeered car.

At Gore st. and the Northern Artery the pursued car swerved and smashed into that in which the officer was riding. The officer jumped on the running board at the time of the crash and hit Banfield, the operator, on the head with the butt of his service revolver.

Teehan fired four shots in the course of the chase. Officer Harry W. Mains, fired three shots as the car went by him. Banfield was captured when Teehan hit him. Kelley was allegedly found hiding behind a fence, after he had plunged into a canal in an attempt to escape capture. The third man escaped.

FARM WASTES TO BE STOPPED

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Behind the nation's changing agricultural drama, government scientists are seeking to utilize 260,000,000 tons of farm by-products that annually go to waste.

The work of these scientists was described in the annual report of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils to Secretary Hyde.

Dr. Henry G. Knight, bureau chief, figures that for every pound of products profitably used there are one to two and a half pounds of which the farmer fails to get any considerable return.

As an instance, attention was paid to obtaining illuminating and heating gas by distillation of cornstalks, cotton seed and fruit and vegetable hulls.

The bureau also is seeking to prevent destruction of foods by insects, molds, bacteria, enzymes, light, humidity, gases, explosions and fires.

Birthday Party for Walsh at Marlboro

Marlboro, Nov. 13—The Greek Democratic Club of Massachusetts, at the Pine Grove Inn, here last night, paid tribute to Senator David I. Walsh on the occasion of his 59th birthday Wednesday. About 75 members from a half dozen cities joined in the tribute. Senator Walsh addressed the gathering. A basket of flowers sent from Governor Ely reached the inn while the Senator was being honored.

TWINS UP FOR $200 LOAN

MICHIGAN IS SCARING G. O. P.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 13 (AP)—For the first time in years, Michigan Republican leaders concede the Democrats a chance next year in this stronghold of Republicanism.

Alarmed over the victory of Michael J. Hart, Democratic foe of prohibition and the farm board in the dry and preponderantly agricultural eighth congressional district, the party's chieftains are preparing for the bitterest fight in years.

Hart is the first Democratic representative elected in the eighth district since 1838.

Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the state Republican central committee, attributes the eighth district defeat to dissatisfaction with economic conditions. He has warned organization members that the Democrats constitute a threat next year with a governor, representatives in Congress and other officers to be elected coincident with a presidential campaign.

Burglar Gets $10,000 Drawn From Bank

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP)—Nicholas Perisich got to his bank one day last June just before it failed and withdrew his $10,000 in savings.

"I was just lucky," he told his friends.

WORKS LONG TO TAG AUTO

The courts having ruled that an automobile parker must be caught in person while in charge of the car—Traffic Officer Selden E. Knight of Traffic 21 went out and caught one that way.

It took Knight all day and part of the early night, but his working overtime was repaid when he handed the tag to the driver, after Knight had stayed on the job for more than half an hour beyond his assignment.

Officer Knight first saw the car, parked in Providence st., a restricted area, at 9:15 a. m., and on his occasional visits to the spot throughout the day noted that it had not been moved. When he was through at 6 p. m. he decided to wait until the driver appeared.

According to the policeman, Lawrence K. Seed of Fuller ave., Swampscott, appeared shortly after 6:30 and admitted he was the driver. He won the tag.

Work on Film Delays Marriage to Marquis

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Hollywood, Nov. 13—Whether the ceremony is performed in a church or her Beverly Hills home—Constance Bennett hasn't quite decided yet—her marriage to the Marquis Henri De La Falaise will be a quiet one.

Connie, working as hard in a picture as if she hadn't stopped long enough to get a marriage license, took time to tell me that she had wanted to be married in Santa Barbara. She had to give up that wish, however, for a license is good only in the county in which it is issued. And Santa Barbara is in a different county than Los Angeles.

WAIT TWO WEEKS

I thought, of course, when I heard that Connie and Henri had applied for a marriage license, that the ceremony would be a matter of a few days.

"I will not get married," said Miss Bennett, "until this picture is finished. Henri and I want to take a honeymoon and certainly no girl would want to marry while she is in the midst of a picture."

"The Lady with a Past," interrupted by the death of Robert Williams, has been slow getting started. Certain scenes have been filmed, but the important ones with Ben Lyons, who was chosen as the leading man yesterday, are yet to be put on the screen.

CONNIE'S THIRD

I should say it will be at least two weeks before the oldest daughter of Richard Bennett becomes the Marquise De La Falaise.

When the ceremony is performed Eileen Percy, newspaper woman and actress, will be matron of honor.

This will be the third marriage for Miss Bennett. Her first took place when she was in school, and it was later annulled. Her second to Phil Plant, multimillionaire, was a social event in New York. She soon tired of the social whirl in Paris and New York and sought her freedom in the divorce courts.

As soon as she was divorced she returned to Hollywood, where she has had a phenomenal success. She will not leave the screen when she marries the Marquis, who has come to America to live and who has directed several excellent French pictures for Radio.

RILEY GIRL'S SISTER DESCRIBES 8 YEARS OF HORROR

chance to adjust itself in the direction of normalcy.

Action of the grand jury will not await results of mental tests, however, and was expected today.

Girls poured in until the tiny ward became a virtual fairy land. A beautiful songbird, sent by a Washington woman, added its twittering to the joyous atmosphere.

AFRAID OF STEPMOTHER

Louise, a frail girl of 20, who looks much younger, in an exclusive interview with an International News Service reporter, described their eight years of misery.

"Edith wasn't the only one who suffered," she said, "though being quite a baby and helpless she could stand up for herself even less than we could. We were all mortally afraid of our stepmother. Even when I saw Edith beaten and shut in the cellar or the cupboard, I was afraid to speak.

"She threatened she would 'fix' me if I told. I have seen her take the child by the throat in a rage and throttle her until her tongue hung out. Sometimes she beat her head against the wall until it bled, but Edith rarely cried. Mother was terrible when she was drunk.

"She has often beaten Francis unmercifully, too. Within this last year she got in a towering rage and threatened to beat the life out of him. She told me to hold him while she did it.

VIRTUAL PRISONERS

"I was afraid of her, but I said, 'I'll never do that to my brother.' But she threatened to beat me, too, and I was terrified. I am not strong and she was very violent. In the end I had to do as she told me.

"We never told any of our relations because we were never allowed to see them. From the time my father married her, no one came to the house.

"We were never allowed out of the house except to go to school, and if we were not home within a quarter of an hour after school ended there was trouble. We had no one to tell, and we were afraid what she might do to us.

"Once or twice I spoke to my father about Edith, but he never said anything more than 'Shut up!' He has lost all his spirit since he married her. He is just about as afraid of her as we are, and he hardly ever speaks. He never had any affection for Edith or me. The only one he took any notice of was Francis.

ALWAYS KEPT DOWNSTAIRS.

"I never knew where Edith was locked up, because I was not allowed to go up to the second floor where the bath-room was. I was always made to use the lavatory in the cellar and to wash in the kitchen. Occasionally she let me go to the bathroom at the very top of the house, but I never had hot water.

"The cold baths made me ill once, but it was not allowed a doctor. She never gave me any advice or told me anything. All I knew about my own health was what I found out from other girls at school.

"Edith was supposed to have a room on the second floor, but after the first four years our stepmother let the room, and we did not know where Edith slept.

"We supposed she slept in our stepmother's room, where there were two single beds. But I found out that that was not true when I had been allowed to have a bath one night and I was fairly late. There was no light upstairs, so I went down to my stepmother's room for a candle.

"I saw her in one bed and her own son, Billy, in the other. Edith was nowhere to be seen, and there was nowhere else for her to sleep. I found out later she was in the closet off our stepmother's bedroom. She had no bed.

"I had a made-up bed in the dining room downstairs. It was terribly cold in the winter and I used to lie awake because we rarely had enough to eat.

"Of course I know times were often hard. My father was not always in regular work, but what money we had was spent on liquor and cigarettes and the 'number game.' She often used to send me down to a shop to place betting money. She would always buy a pack of cigarettes before she would buy food for us children.

"We were never very clean. It got to worry me because my skin was in such a state. I was 20, and had less liberty than a five-year-old child. Sometimes I used to feel there couldn't be a God, when He could allow such things to be.

EDITH WAS NORMAL CHILD

"I can remember my little sister as a healthy, normal child, and when I saw her blinking in that dark cupboard, smaller than she had been at 4 years old, and with her legs too feeble to bear her, I thought my heart would break.

"I have never been able to guess why our stepmother did all these things, unless for spite. I think she is a bit mad, and then she is a heavy drinker, too. She never knew our own motive, but I have heard her call her bad names. Once I stood up to her over it but she only shouted at me. She never cared what language she used.

"Before we went to her, Edith was a normal child. I remember her perfectly then. The fact that she is out of her mind now is not so strange as that Francis and I are still sane."

Before Harry Riley's second marriage, his three children were happy and well, living with their grandmother, Mrs. Annadale (their mother's mother), and their two maternal aunts, Louis Riley said.

They lived in this way for the first four years of Edith's life, and then the second Mrs. Riley—for a reason known only to herself—went to court for the custody of the children, and won them against the grandmother's anxious pleading.

BANDITS BEAT CRIPPLE

After debating for 10 minutes whether to kill him or spare him two gunmen last night beat Fred Radchio, of 19 Carlson st., Everett, in his grocery store, at 450 Ferry st., Malden, and looted his till of $38.

The gunmen noticed that Radchio's left leg was of wood and they kicked the leg from him, and began to taunt him, shoving their guns at his head and debating whether they would kill him.

After emptying the cash drawer they told Radchio that they would "finish" him if he reported to police.

A short time later, Harry B. Caldwell, 35, of 40 Chauncey st., Watertown, an insurance collector, reported that he was held up and robbed of $71 by two gunmen while crossing a vacant lot at Jerome and Lincoln sts., Medford.

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—The frontier delicacy of buffalo meat will delight the palate of the Blackfeet on their Montana reservation this winter.

They will return to their ancestral diet of buffalo meat through the agency of the National Park Service. Drought and grasshoppers laid waste much of the reservation's food supply during the past summer and the park service offered 100 buffalo which, when dressed, will furnish 50,000 pounds of excellent meat.

The Yellowstone range will support only 1000 of the animals, and there were several hundred which had to be disposed of or fed at government expense.

The graduation of the Peter Bent Brigham School of Nursing was held at Simmons College Auditorium, Fenway, last night.

MORE LIBERTY, CRY STUDENTS

Ada, O., Nov. 13 (AP)—Students revolted today against regulations prohibiting dances on teh campus of Ohio Northern University.

Calling social conditions on the campus "grossly unfair, unjust and oppressive," the students asked more freedom in general and specifically for permission to hold a university dance in connection with the coming annual football banquet. Petitions were circulated among the 800 students. A hearing was promised by Dr. Robert Williams, president of the university.

Dancing has been prohibited on the university campus for 10 years.

Lowell, Nov. 13—The 100th anniversary of St. Patrick's parish—the oldest Catholic parish in this city, was celebrated at the Memorial Auditorium last night.

Cardinal O'Connell, unable to attend because of the meeting of the Catholic Hierarchy in Washington, sent a message of regret.

Rev. Dr. John J. McGarry, pastor, and his assistants, Rev. Patrick J. Flaherty, Rev. John J. Allston, Rev. Daniel J. Sullivan and Rev. Joseph Kenney greeted their parishioners and friends.

Rev. Dr. McGarry addressed the gathering, recounting the history of the church and Catholicity in Lowell, and pointing out the progress that had been made.

Police Tag Wanders, but Driver Admits Illegal Parking

The story of a traveling police tag was told in the Newton court when Joseph H. Taylor, 42, of Ripley st., Newton Center, was fined $25 on a charge of parking his car without lights.

Patrolman J. F. O'Donnell told the court yesterday that after he tagged Taylor's car, someone removed the tag and tied it to the wheel of a truck that was parked nearby. The officer did not see Taylor park the car, but the defendant admitted his guilt.

WOMEN TO AID VETS' DRIVE

Through their ward organizations women Republican leaders have rallied to the support of the disabled veterans in their drive for funds through the Forget-Me-Not day. A large number of volunteer workers have been needed, and while women from various organizations have offered their assistance at the D. A. V. headquarters at 600 Washington st., many more were and are needed.

Mrs. Dora Emerson Wheeler, Republican leader, was appealed to assist. She at once communicated with Republican women ward leaders and enlisted their support and they in turn will recruit Republican women of their reppective wards.

Work was begun yesterday in unpacking and sorting the 150,000 forget-me-nots at the D. A. V. headquarters. Mrs. Catherine Foster, widow of a YD veteran and commander of Silver Star chapter auxiliary of Boston of the D. A. V., was in charge of the work.

Congressmen John W. McCormack and William P. Connery, lent their aid to the drive last evening when they made strong appeals over the radio for support of the drive and for volunteer workers to sell the flowers tomorrow.

PLAN OFFERED IN DOCK ROW

Arbitration of the controversy over meal hours and sling loads by a board of either three or five members, is under consideration by steamship agents as a means of breaking the deadlock existing in the strike now in its fifth week.

Thomas H. Mahoney, counsel for the longshoremen's committee, in a letter sent to John N. Levins of the steamship operators' committee of Boston, asks him if his committee would be willing to submit these issues to arbitration. Mahoney suggested that the board of arbitration might be appointed as follows:

"1—One member to be appointed by your committee, and one member to be appointed by the longshoremen's committee, and the chairman to be appointed by Gov. Ely.

"2—One member to be appointed by your committee, and one member to be appointed by the longshoremen's committee, one member to be appointed by Mayor Curley, one member to be appointed by Police Commissioner Hultman, and the chairman to be appointed by the governor."

Police Lauded for Work in Dart Case

Letters from Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe and Mayor Sinclair Weeks, commending the Newton police for apprehending and prosecuting Wilfred F. Dart, who was convicted of second degree murder last Friday, were read at roll call at police headquarters yesterday.

FORGET-ME-NOT DRIVE

Widow of World War Veteran aids Forget-Me-Not Drive of Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Mrs. Catherine R. Foster, widow of Malcolm Foster, Yankee Division Veteran, sorting flowers at headquarters, 600 Washington st., for the drive which will be held in Boston, Saturday, November 14. Mrs. Foster is commander of Silver Star Chapter Auxiliary, D. A. V. of Boston. Funds from the drive will go to aid disabled veterans.

GRENFELL TELLS OF AIR TRIP

The beauties of scenic Labrador, hitherto practically inaccessible to the tourist, will soon be viewed in comfort from the air, in the opinion of Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, famous medical missionary of the Far North.

Inspired by an air survey of his domain, which he made last summer, Dr. Grenfell declares that airplanes offer the ideal means of inspecting some of the most beautiful scenery in the world.

In a lecture to Harvard Medical School students at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, given jointly with Dr. Alexander Forbes, he describes his recent trip, in which the plane was piloted by Harold G. Crowley of Winthrop.

With lantern slides, Dr. Grenfell demonstrated the marked difference in transportation in reaching the famous Grand Falls, one of the feature attractions of the country.

By canoe, he said, it takes three months to reach the falls, but Crowley flew the big plane there in two and one-half hours.

Dr. Grenfell also pointed out that the fiords of the northern coast of Labrador far surpass in height and grandeur anything in the world, including the famous fiords of Norway.

By canoe, he said, it takes three months to reach the falls, but Crowley flew the big plane there in two and one-half hours.

Prof. Ward Will Be Buried Tomorrow

Harvard officials and scientists will attend the funeral services to be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock in Christ Church for Prof. Robert DeCourcy Ward, 63, of Harvard who died yesterday at his home, 37 Fayerweather st., Cambridge.

The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in the Mt. Auburn cemetery.

19 Bottles on the Wall

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We'll have to let the cat out of the bag so we can count the kittens.

Have you read, "The President's Brother-in-Law," with a foreword by the chief of police of Santa Monica?

It seems that Take-it-or-leavitt was going about his business with a gunnysack on his shoulder when somebody joggled his elbow. The gunnysack rattled like sleigh bells in a frosty morning.

It contained 19 pints of rare old pompadour tonic. One drink strong enough to pop your vest buttons and two drinks guaranteed to tip your hat with both hands in your pockets.

Take-it-or-leavitt says he was toting the burlap just to do a friend a favor. He meant 19 friends.

Nineteen pints is no easy load. Why, Take-it-or-leavitt must be the hod carrier for the whole California wine brick industry.

Well, things ain't so bad for Take-it-or-leavitt.

Could be worse. They might have caught him on the second trip.

RESEARCH NEED IS STRESSED

New England manufacturers must pay more attention to research work for the development of new products, new uses for old products and cheaper manufacturing methods, if New England's position in industry is to be maintained, according to James M. Hook, chairman of the Industrial Committee of the New England Council.

"Much has been said," Hook declared today, "as to the needs of 'white collar men' who, through no fault of their own, find themselves among the ranks of the unemployed. Their numbers include many chemists, engineers, and other technically trained men.

"Among New England's 18,000 manufacturers there are many who can give employment to men of this type and at the same time greatly strengthen the position of their industries. They can do this by each adding to his force one technical man and assigning him to work on some research problem, the solution of which will aid the business.

"The story of the advance of modern industry is becoming more and more a story of the results of research methods applied to manufacturing problems."

The development of new products, reduction of manufacturing costs, and other means of increasing employment and profits, will be discussed by leading New England industrial executives, at the industrial session of the Seventh New England Conference to be held at Hotel Statler, Boston, November 19 and 20. The conference is held under the auspices of the New England Council.

WE HEAR THAT SOCIAL SALEM IS GOING TO RUN some "cheap and hungrys" at that shrine of bygone glory, Hamilton Hall on historic Chestnut st. This will be to infuse a little life into the winter season in these depressing days. Salem has always been in a state of depression, at least for years—we know, we lived there once. But the younger group have yearned for a pot of red to paint the town with and more power to them—it is a thankless task.

These dances will be inaugurated like check dancing at so much per dance and as Salem has ever paid as she went, they should be a success.

The Privateers, a players group which attempt to get a little fun out of amateur theatricals, are rehearsing "Three Live Ghosts" for performance at the Empire Theater the week after Christmas.

REBECCA BENSON

REBECCA BENSON, A DAUGHTER OF OLD SALEM, whose engagement to a Pittsburgh lad was announced a short time ago, is busy fixing up her future home in Essex st. This is father, Henry P. Benson's, wedding gift to her. It is half of a duplex house in the best part of town and the future Mrs. Haskell will again triumph in her own country as a married matron as she has in the past as a belle. Husband-to-be is attached to the famous old Parker Game Co. of the Witch City.

IN THE CURRENT SOCIAL REGISTER which has just appeared there is a surprising increase in deaths among men among the names listed. Last year the ratio was 58 men to 47 women, but this year the records show that 86 men have passed away as against 28 women. Marriages have increased 27 per cent over last year. In spite of careers, the best life insurance is marriage, it seems.

MRS. HUGH BANCROFT and a group of friends will occupy a ring-side table at the dance and cabaret to be given by the Forty-Five Club on Nov. 19 at the Copley Plaza, as the grand finale of the two-day bazaar for the benefit of the Florence Crittenton League. Others who have reserved tables are Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller who will entertain a party of young folks in honor of her daughter; Mrs. Vincent Rich, Mrs. John Whitney, Mrs. Henry T. Bourne, Mrs. Harold Plimpton and Mrs. Robert M. Prouty. There will be specialty numbers by Vincent Club entertainers. A group of Junior League girls will sell cigarettes and conduct the guests to booths where their fortunes will be told by well-known crystal gazers and palmists.

THE CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN CLUB is making a new departure this season to aid its work in helping the showgirl and will have a musicale, with Mr. George Fior, pianist, as guest artist, on Wednesday evening at 8 p. m.

USHERING TODAY AT THE University Club for the Institute of Current International Problems in the United States are a group of Junior League girls headed by Linda Collens and Helen Homans, assisted by Hope Hubbard, Eliza Bowditch, Frances Winlock, Lucile Swift, Ruth Wheelwright, Eleanor Stephensen and Peggy Bradley.

DEAR HELEN: WE DID get a thrill reading your letter, Mrs. James Roosevelt (Betsy Cushing) would be pleased, we are sure, to know that someone admires her and you are quite correct in your estimate of this very charming young matron. She was always one of the most popular girls in her presentation year, full of fun and frolic, but always having time to devote to those less fortunate than herself. The boys in the hospitals think she is a peach. Some day soon we will print her picture and tell you what she is doing to help out in these depressing days, because we are sure she is doing something. She and Jimmie have a darling home in Cambridge and are divinely happy. And her smile is even more beautiful when you meet her than it is in a picture.

WE WILL HAVE TO BRUSH up on our geneology if you are going to check up on us. Indeed, we do have crushes, but we try to keep it a secret, as you do, because we believe in giving everyone a square deal. And if we appear to overlook any dear little deb it is because she has not called herself to our attention lately. We will get around to all of them in time.

Death Takes 6 New York Stage Notables

New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—The stage has suffered the loss by death of half a dozen of its folk in and about New York this week.

The list includes Norma Phillips, who was known on the screen as "The Mutual Girl"; Fred Tilden, Homer Lind, Mrs. Herbert Flansburgh, Max Fehrman and James Wilson Ashley, the latter a casting agent and artists' representative.

Society Notes

THE C. CAMPBELL PATTERSONS are at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. Patterson was before her marriage in Emmanuel Church on the 6th, Miss Peggy Bent. They are not sailing for the West Indies, as they will spend the remainder of their wedding trip, until Tuesday.

MR. AND MRS. THEODORE E. BROWN have left New York, where they were registered at the Berkshire, for Germantown, Pa., where Mr. Brown's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio C. Wood, Jr., make their home, and where Mr. and Mrs. Brown will live temporarily. Mrs. Brown was the former Mrs. Robert Cunningham Morse of Milton.

DEBS PLAN JOINT DEBUT

MISS MASON MISS RUSSELL

TWO OF THE SEASON'S debutantes are shown with the wares they sold at the Christopher Shop Cabaret Wednesday evening, at the Ritz-Carlton—Miss Junia Mason, daughter of the Harold F. Masons of Dedham, and Miss Louise Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Russell, of Marlborough st. They will make their debut together at a dance to be given at the Brookline Country Club, Jan. 6.

Ritz-Carlton Is Also Scene of Dinner

Friday, the 13th, and Miss Babette Morison makes her debut this evening at a dance that promises to be one of the most brilliant so far—if the day and date do not bring the mishaps sometimes anticipated. Miss Morison is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Morison of Louisburg sq., and a popular member of both the Junior League and Vincent Club.

An ushers' dinner will precede the dance, both taking place at the Ritz-Carlton, to which about 50 guests have been invited. Heading the group of ushers will be Gardner Cox.

Also at the dinner will be a group of Miss Morison's sister-debs, and her three sisters, the Misses Nancy, Mary and Elizabeth Morison. Included are the Misses Jane Bancroft, Mary Jane Bigelow, Ruth Crousett, Helen Homans, Marjorie Morrill, a cousin; Justine Prince, Emily Perkins, Elizabeth Shurcliff, Betty Spalding, Anne Richardson, Nancy Verdi and Jane Wheeler. The Misses Morrill, Prince and Spalding are post-debs.

Dinner Dresses for Weddings

By ANN ARDEN

THIS SEASON the formal dinner dress is made from either velvet or satin. That is, these two materials stand highest in favor for this particular type of frock.

THERE IS nothing nicer than a dress of black velvet to wear to a wedding. If it is a full dress evening wedding then you can go into colors and very decolcte designs, for there is no occasion that calls for greater dressiness than a wedding which has been planned along very formal lines.

* * *

THE COSTUME pictured is both practical and chic to grace any evening function. The gown is of black satin, with bias form fitting sections topping the low placed fullness of the skirt, and a high draped neckline, cut to waist depth at back.

THE WHITE bunny wrap is exquisite, dolman-like affair, incredibly soft, and always becoming, boasting graceful loop sleeves, an upstanding collar, and curved front edges. The coat is reminiscent of the bolero, but lacks the fitted lines of that popular short jacket. Small wonder that these little fur wraps refuse to fall from their pedestal of popularity—they can top gowns of black, white, or the very new jewel or stained glass shades.

Women to Aid Campaign for Hospital

Mrs. Henry Brainbridge Chapin has formed, and is chairman of, a committee boasting more than a hundred members to help put over the Faulkner Hospital drive to remove indebtedness, the campaign beginning next Tuesday evening, the 17th, at a dinner at the Hotel Statler. Associate chairmen on the committee are Mrs. Casper G. Bacon, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell, Miss Cornelia Bowditch and Miss Emily Denney.

Mrs. Chapin has divided her workers into teams, each having a captain who will report to the chairmen. These include Mrs. William DeFord Reid, Mrs. William H. Frennan, Mrs. Isaac R. Edwards, Mrs. Reginald C. Heath, Mrs. Richard L. McHale, Mrs. Horatio Rogers, Mrs. Charles F. Rowley, Mrs. Marcy L. Sperry, Mrs. Storer P. Ware, Mrs. Leonard Wheeler, Jr., Mrs. Max O. Whiting, Mrs. Grenant T. Winslow, Miss Louise Slocum and Miss Elizabeth Huntington.

Laval, Von Hoesch Take Up Debts Again

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP)—Premier Laval conferred again today with Dr. Leopold von Hoesch, German Ambassador, regarding the reparations and debts problem.

Later, the Premier welcomed German delegates here for the first meeting of the Franco-German economic commission, which convened this afternoon.

English Flier Off After New Record

Lympne, England, Nov. 13 (INS)—J. A. Mollison, English flier, took off today in a 120-horsepower monoplane in an attempt to establish a new flight record between England and Cape Town.

The record holder is Miss Peggy Salsman, 19-year-old London debutante, who made the flight in less than six days.

WHO PAYS THE PRICE OF WINE SELLERS' NEW VIRTUE?

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

REBECCA WEST WAS COMMENTING the other day on the heroic and almost stultifying calm with which the British newspapers took the break in the gold standard. The Times, it appears, gave the announcement its due news value—about as much as a conservative American paper gives to the discovery of a five-legged dog or a new planet. The English still are a little uncertain about having news on page one of their gazettes, a position they reserve for calm advertisements in greyish type, and for their extremely personal agony columns. The three great lords of British journalism (Northcliffe, Rothermere and Beaverbrook) all made the American system familiar, but the feeling persists that a good, decent newspaper puts news where it belongs—on page ten or so

Tight Little Isle

The stoicism of the British press is, however, less impressive than its infrequent raids into the sensational. On one occasion, a few years ago, a terrific storm stopped all traffic across the Channel, and one London paper headed its story, in bold type, with the words, "Continent Isolated." An American who was there at the time thought the heading funny; but none of her English friends agreed. They were the boys of the bulldog breed.

Dean Inge, apparently, is of another strain. He believes that the British Empire is bound to break up, and he is neither excessively happy nor excessively unhappy over the prospect. He never was one to believe that size is of the first importance to a nation, and he has enough historical background to know that a large number of quite intelligent and patriotic Englishmen, during the nineteenth century, were not enthusiastic over the course of empire. I think Mr. Chesterton, for one, still is something of a Little Englander.

This Realm, This England!

The dismemberment of the empire, if it comes about, will be traced to weakness. (Probably the usual luck of the Labor Party will hold and it will come into power just as the decisive split occurs.) Inasmuch as every one will be doing everything possible to avoid the catastrophe, it will come with the force of a major disaster, and no one will be cool and cynical enough to suggest the possibility that the British Empire had outlived its usefulness, as the Roman Empire did before it and as the French overlordship of Europe did two hundred years ago.

The Sun Never Sets

The British Empire, like the American Republic, is many things—it is a system of government and a foundation of order in the world. It is, in an extremely negligible way, an institution for making Englishmen feel great and important. If other and better governments are discovered, and if a new framework for order in the world is found, the desirability of keeping alive the image of "the greatest empire on earth" isn't worth the strain.

An enterprising salesman has just informed me that the cost of unfermented wine, delivered to your home in accordance with all the laws of the land and under the benediction of the Federal Farm Board, will rise 30 per cent. The reason is that by an agreement with the Government, the companies selling the unfermented grape juice will, hereafter, refuse to "service" it for you. That is to say, they will maintain the fiction of not selling fruit juice for the purpose of fermentation; and you will pay the price of their virtue.

Whose Triumph?

It is to be understood that instead of house-to-house selling with promise that at the appointed time a man will come and put your product into bottles, the liquid will be sold in every grocery store in the country. This is called a triumph for prohibition. The "service" heretofore rendered has been of the most casual sort. When the keg was delivered, a man took out a bung, put in a cork through which two glass pipes had been passed, and attached the end of one pipe to some rubber hose which led into a large bottle containing some sort of oil. Thereafter time, not the seller of the vintage, worked for you, and at the end of 60 days or more or less active bubbling, bottles were brought to your house.

Who Pays?

Now the Government has won a victory and the consumer pays for it. All it means is that some enterprising fellow will create a force of "service" men who will do the work, exacting payment from you or from the original company which can, unofficially, recommend these experts to you. I suddenly feel as resentful about prohibition as I did five years ago. Only now it seems a sillier and more hypocritical and more expensive experiment than ever.

What Constitutes a War?

To complete today's catalog of complaints, I do not understand what is happening in Geneva. The idea seems to be that the League of Nations will, in its own good time, prevent war between Japan and China. But no one explains what the armed encounters between Japanese and Chinese soldiers are supposed to be. Are they practise wars? Or demonstrations? Do the soldiers who get killed know that they are not killed in a war? And just how much more of this has to happen before it will be time for decisive action to take place?

What Constitutes Hunger?

Being in a profoundly international mood today, I find a similar series of questions regarding our own country. We have been told on the highest authority that Americans would not be allowed to starve this winter. Winter, according to the calendar, begins in about six weeks; according to fact, and starvation, it already has begun. I want to know what is meant by saying "they shall not starve." Does it mean that respectable and prosperous people will not starve? Or does it actually apply to those who from lack of nourishment and clothes contract pneumonia and die of some ill which is not marked down as starvation in the hospital records? Does it mean that we will not allow ten millions to starve or that we will prevent even one child from dying of hunger? Or, in other words, aren't people—a few people—starving now? And if they are, when does our veto on starvation come into effect?

HOOVER TOSSES BALL WITH HIS COLLEGE PALS

Washington, Nov 13 (AP)—The football team of Leland Stanford U. switched its game to medicine ball today and joined President Hoover in his morning exercise on the south lawn of the White House.

So thoroughly did the President and the team he helped manage enjoy their reunion last night, that Mr. Hoover's parting words were an invitation to return again today.

The President's gridiron dinner turned out to be a quiet but pleasant affair. There were no cheers or songs.

TURN BACK TO 90'S

But its keynote was a turning back of music and conversation to the college days of the 90's, and those who attended said Mr. Hoover made a "good listener" and seemed to "particularly enjoy" the whole affair.

In all, 12 members of the team returned to sit about an oval table in the state dining room of the executive mansion, decorated with Stanford's colors of red and white, and swap tales of their football days.

The men now banker, doctors, lawyers, engineer, author and rancher, but when on the Stanford in 1894 the football championship of the West, came from East, West and South to attend.

MARINE BAND PLAYS

They did give a college cheer led by Will Irwin, author, as they met with the President yesterday afternoon for a picture.

During the dinner the Marine Band and Orchestra, with red coats and white collars that approximated the Stanford colors, played old college songs and popular airs of 37 years ago. There was the lilt of "A Bicycle Built for Two" and others.

Gloria and Hubby on Legal Honeymoon

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (US)—Somewhere in California, or maybe in Arizona or Mexico, Gloria Swanson and Michael Farmer today were continuing a honeymoon they began secretly in August, but which became official only last Monday at Yuma immediately after she received her final divorce decree here.

With all legal hazards, occasioned by the secret ceremony last August in New York, removed, it is expected that the couple will return soon to prepare for their contemplated trip to Europe.

U. S. Big Consumer of Citrus Fruits

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (AP)—More than 187,000 cars of citrus fruits were consumed by Americans in the season just closed, an increase of 51,000 cars over 1930, Paul S. Armstrong, general manager of the California Fruit Growers Exchange says in his annual report. The California crop alone had a delivered value of $145,261,069 and yielded $99,520,772 to the growers.

The supply from all sources was 48 per cent greater than last year and 6 per cent above the record of 1929.

Learn Stocks

"What our school children need is less Greek, Latin and languages, and more knowledge of the evils of selling short and buying on margin." So spoke Louis P. Benezet, superintendent of schools of Manchester, N. H., at the convention of the New England School Superintendents.

FIVE LOOT BANK OF $82,000

Rahway, N. J., Nov. 13 (AP)—Five armed robbers today escaped from the Citizens' National Bank with the $82,000 payroll of Gibbs & Hill, Inc., after threatening a dozen customers and bank clerks.

The robbers disappeared in a black sedan a few moments after taking a registered mail pouch containing the money from J. H. Farrell, paymaster of the company.

The company, employing several hundred men, engages in electrification work of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The pouch had been delivered in an armored car, under police guard. The car left immediately to return to the postoffice for a bag containing the payrolls of the Merck Chemical Co., Inc., and the Wheatena Cereal Co.

The robbers directed women and children to stand behind a railed enclosure, while bank employes and several male customers were lined up against a wall with hands outstretched.

Rescuers Find Lost Hunter

Cherryfield, Me., Nov. 13—Gibbs Russell, 28 year-old hunter who disappeared in the woods two days ago was found sitting on a log at Hemlock Point, Franklin, yesterday.

KNICKERS MADE IN RECORD TIME

Wool shorn and worn as knickers in two hours, nine minutes and 44 seconds! That is the world's time record for the manufacture of the finished product from the sheep's back.

These knickers, made in England in the world's fastest time, are now on display in the windows of the Gilchrist Co.

The original record for fast time in shearing and tailoring was established in Pennsylvania in 1898, when wool from the sheep's back was converted into a suit of clothes in six hours, and four minutes.

It was not broken until last June 23, when an English firm did the same trick in three hours, 28½ minutes. The next day, however, the knickers now on show at Gilchrist's were turned out, lowering the new record by more than an hour. They were sent to this country on the special request of Felix Vorenberg, president of Gilchrist's.

Science finds new reasons for KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

MILLIONS have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe way to overcome common constipation. Now science shows this delicious cereal brings three benefits to the diet: "Bulk." Vitamin B. Iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like the "bulk" in lettuce—only it is concentrated in a more convenient form to relieve constipation. It absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

Vitamin B tones the intestines, and promotes regular habits.

Iron builds blood, and aids health generally.

No wonder ALL-BRAN is considered far more natural than pills and drugs — so often habit-forming. Try two tablespoonfuls daily. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal or use in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FIVE PARISHES CREATED BY CARDINAL

Transfer of four pastors, elevation of nine senior curates to pastorates and the inauguration of five new parishes in the archdiocese, to become effective next Wednesday, have been announced by Cardinal O'Connell.

New parishes will be started in Brockton, to include territory taken from St. Edward's, Montello and St. Patrick's, Brockton. In Milton, near the Mattapan line; Bedford, formerly a mission; South Natick, and East Lexington.

In some places where new parishes are to be formed, there are chapels, but in others the priests will have the task of building to confront them.

Rev. Walter H. Gill, pastor of the Church of the Star of the Sea, Marblehead, has been transferred to the pastorate of St. Patrick's Church, Brockton.

Other transfers of priests, the parishes they leave and their new assignments, are:

Rev. [illegible] Mooney, parish priest of [illegible], as parish priest of St. [illegible] Church, Lynn.

Rev. Patrick J. Ryan, parish priest of Church of the Nativity, Belmont, to pastor St. Patrick's Church, Lynn.

Rev. Thomas A. Quinlan, parish priest of Sacred Heart Church, South Natick, to pastor Church of the Nativity, Belmont.

Rev. Daniel F. Dorman, assistant at St. Patrick's Church, West Lynn, to pastor St. John's Church, Lynnfield Center.

Rev. John H. Powers, S.S., assistant at St. Monica's parish, Methuen, to pastor St. Monica's parish, Methuen.

Rev. Leo J. Leahy, assistant at St. Eugene's parish, Framingham, to pastor Star of the Sea Church, Marblehead.

Rev. Jeremiah J. Herlihy, assistant at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Salem, to pastor Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Stoneham.

Rev. William J. Clarke, assistant at St. Mary's church, Watertown, to pastor new parish in Brockton.

Rev. William H. Welch, assistant at the Church of St. Thomas Aquinas, Needham, to pastor St. Michael's Church, Bedford.

Rev. James F. Cassidy, assistant at St. Lawrence Church, Brookline, to pastor at Sacred Heart parish, South Natick.

Rev. Richard E. Ryan, assistant at the Church of Sacred Heart, Malden, to pastor of new parish in Milton.

Rev. Michael A. Connor, assistant at St. Joseph's parish, Medford, to pastor of new parish, a Church of the Sacred Heart, East Lexington.

Woman, 103, Oldest Resident in Lynn

Mrs. Harriet Laviana Horton Hodges of 61 Breed st. is probably the oldest woman resident in Lynn, and Clarkson Post, G. A. R. veteran, who observed his 95th birthday Monday, is said to be the oldest man here.

Mrs. Hodges is past her 103d birthday and is still surprisingly active.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK A GLASS OF WATER

Italian Science Working Wonders on Headache and Stomach Sufferers With Simple, Internal Bathing

Why is it that eight out of every ten people today are being made miserable, unhappy and inefficient by constant headaches?

Italian science startled the world by giving plain effervescent water before breakfast as the remedy. A homely treatment, but effective sometimes beyond belief. A form of intestinal bathing that makes anemic-looking, pasty-faced, headachy and stomach-acidity people take on new life, new appearance and new health.

The way the treatment works is on the same principle of washing out the intestines every morning before breakfast just like you wash dirt off your face and hands. For just as it is necessary to clean ashes from a furnace before a fire burns bright and clear, so it is necessary to wash out the stomach BEFORE food goes into it.

Otherwise you must likely cause a bad condition by mixing the food you eat with ptomaine-like accumulations in the stomach that virtually poison the fresh foods you put in it.

For that reason, every man or woman—whether sick or well—is advised to drink each morning BEFORE BREAKFAST, one-half glass of water with two tablespoonfuls of ordinary Italian Brioschi effervescent in it, followed by a large glass of plain water. That's the whole Italian treatment tens of thousands of people today are crediting with near-miracles in the relief of constant headaches, sour stomach, acidity, constipation, biliousness, attacks and general lowbrindle and debility.

The Italian Brioschi effervescent tonic with water can be obtained in large cans at any store for a few cents. The way to pronounce the word is Bree-oss-ky—ordinary Italian B, one a. A few days of it will suffice to make most anyone a crank on the subject of intestinal bathing.

BANQUET FOR "BILL"

Transit Commissioner Arthur B. Corbett will be toastmaster at the dinner in honor of William L. Anderson, assistant secretary to Mayor Curley, in the Hotel Westminster tomorrow night. "Bill" was recently elected senior vice commander-in-chief of the Sons of Union Veterans, and friends are to gather in his honor at that time.

FEMININE BOWLERS

The members of the City Hall Girls' Bowling League held their second meeting last night. The league now consists of four teams with five members each.

ONE UNION TO ANOTHER

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Errant [illegible] ending the municipal employees' credit society of Chicago, were visitors to the city employes' credit union in City Hall yesterday. Miss Josephine Schieb, office manager, explained the local credit system to them.

PURCHASES PUP

Miss Mary Dalton of the city employes credit union, purchased a nine weeks-old Irish terrier pup yesterday. She named him "Washneen," which in the Gaelic, means "Little One."

SPEECH WON VOTES

Senator John F. Buckley of Charlestown, in pleading for the $50,000 appropriation for removing the hulks on the East Boston flats was credited with having made one of the most forceful speeches in the Senate during the special session. It resulted in large measure in getting enough members to vote to overturn the adverse committee report on the project.

BOOMED AS SPEAKER

Senator Samuel H. Wragg of Needham, while engaged in conversation with Speaker Leverett Saltonstall on the rostrum in the House, was applauding as the next president of the upper chamber.

DAILY REVERSES VOTE

Rep. Francis D. Dailey of Boston, who originally voted for the Mahoney deduction increases bill, reversed his action and voted no when the same bill, revived in the Senate, was returned to the House. Dailey, during his recent unsuccessful fight for a seat in the Boston City Council, flayed four of his Democratic colleagues over the radio for doing what he finally did himself.

RADIO REPLACES METAL LUNG

New York, Nov. 13—The mechanical lung which has been keeping 5-year-old Herbert Fuchs alive for 10 weeks was stopped last night by doctors in King's County Hospital, who then turned on the radio for two minutes.

Herbert, a victim of infantile paralysis, smiled wanly, and then laughed for the first time since he was taken ill. His eyes gleamed with pleasure as the voice of Kate Smith, radio crooner, sang "Sonny Boy."

The experiment, carried out with the consent of the boy's parents physicians said, may save his life.

"He was greatly stimulated," said Dr. Emil Smith, "and I have no doubt the music has helped his chances. Herbert is a brave kid, but I'm afraid he was beginning to realize his condition."

Anti-Semetic Riots

Warsaw, Poland, Nov. 13—New anti-Semetic attacks occurred in Warsaw, Cracow, Vilna and Lemberg yesterday.

School in Moscow for Americans Opens

Moscow, Nov. 13 — Fifty-two American children, ranging in age from six to 14, are attending Moscow's first American school. It was opened yesterday.

Only the designation of English instead of Russian as the language of tuition will distinguish it from schools which the proletarian Russian children attend. The majority of the text books are to be literal translations of work employed in the indigenous educational institutions.

Maynard Workers Ready to End Strike

Maynard, Nov. 13—It was voted by representatives of the 1200 striking workers of the Assabet Mills here tonight to call off the strike which started 10 days ago.

The strike began when girls in one department refused to handle work sent from the Lawrence mills, where the big textile strike was in progress. Workers' representatives stated last night that since the Lawrence strike has been called off, the Assabet workers are ready to return.

New York, Nov. 13—Yellow haired Norma Taylor, one of Texas Guinan's "gang" on that unsuccessful attempt to invade Paris, told Official Referee M. Warley Platzek that the man with whom she eloped on May 12 was unfaithful to her on June 30.

William Duryea, wealthy tailor from whom the comely show girl is seeking a divorce, did not contest her action in court yesterday. The referee reserved decision.

Boston Trio Held on Break Charge

Fall River, Nov. 13—Anthony Pina of Fulton st., Dorchester; Lucio Guinan's "gang" on that unsuccessful attempt to invade Paris, told Official Referee M. Warley Platzek that the man with whom she eloped on May 12 was unfaithful to her on June 30.

William Duryea, wealthy tailor from whom the comely show girl is seeking a divorce, did not contest her action in court yesterday. The referee reserved decision.

Anthony Pina of Fulton st., Dorchester; Lucio Guinan and Clifford H. Camaros of Granger st., Dorchester, were held in bonds of $1000 and $5000 respectively by Judge Benjamin Cook in the Second District Court here yesterday.

All three face charges of attempting to break and enter the home of George F. Kent in South Westport, Nov. 10.

CLERIC UP FOR NON-SUPPORT

The Rev. Ethan Henry of the Church of the Good Samaritan, who is also operator of an elevator in a Boylston st. building, and who was found guilty by a Suffolk County jury of non-support of his wife, Beulah, and their three-months-old daughter, will learn his fate on Monday.

Mrs. Henry testified yesterday that on Thanksgiving Day her husband put her out of the house after grabbing the paper she was reading and throwing it into the fire.

She admitted on cross-examination, having written a love letter to another man but declared she had never sent the letter. She denied also that she had thrown a kettle out of her window so that a man might come in when her husband was not home. She declared her husband had kicked her around the floor during many arguments.

Mr. Henry said he obtained nothing for his personal services but did receive $20 a week as an executor. He denied any assault and battery upon his wife.

Pipe Lines to Carry Fresh Milk Planned

Chicago, Nov. 13 (USA)—Pipe lines to carry fresh milk from the dairy to the bottling plant and powdered coal direct to the consumer's furnace was an idea presented by H. E. Rockefeller, development engineer, at the International Acetylene Association at the Congress Hotel yesterday.

Chelsea Pays Off $1,000,000 Debts in One Day

One million dollars in loans was paid off by the city of Chelsea yesterday. City Treasurer George Hedersen paid $500,000 to a Boston bank and the other half a million to a New York bank.

More than a million dollars in taxes for the year have yet to be collected and the treasurer is urging the taxpayers to pay at once so that the city can meet financial obligations.

There remains a total of $675,000 in loans to mature within the next month.

NEW FUNDS FOR HARBOR JOB

Washington, Nov. 13: An allotment of $1,000,000 for further work on the Fall River, Mass., Harbor project was made by Acting Secretary of War Hurley Dixon.

[illegible] for a channel [illegible] and feet wide through Mt. Hope Bay and the Fall River Harbor. [illegible] dredging has been [illegible] on a contract now near [illegible].

A survey revealed that the total tonnage to complete the dredging proposed will exceed the original estimate.

CONVICT SLAIN IN SING SING

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 13 — Stabbed twice, Abner Schoonmaker, 26, died in Sing Sing prison, the third inmate slain by fellow prisoners within six months.

Schoonmaker, alias Frank Morrow was serving a life sentence for burglary from Dutchess county.

The first information of the stabbing reached prison officials when Schoonmaker staggered toward keeper Irving Wood, standing outside the cell block and told him somebody gave him the works. He did before he could name his slayer.

Warden Law said none of the convicts would admit having seen the stabbing, apparently committed with a sharp instrument fashioned from the prison shop.

The killing was similar to that of Frank Irwin, 21, on June 20, in one of the recreation rooms.

Within a week, John De Luca was stabbed in the side while seated on the uncovered audiotorium at a motion picture show. He died within 24 hours.

Gypsy Marriage is Upheld by U. S.

PAIR FINED IN LOTTERY

Attleboro Nov 13—William S. Merrill, 51, of West st., Mansfield, and Lewis S. Cashman, 33, of Poplar st. Chelsea, were found guilty in district court of promoting a lottery and were fined $200 each. They appealed and were held in $400.

Edward I. Epstein of 2 Paine rd. Mansfield a garage mechanic charged he held the luck ticket in "the wager straight card pool" and failed to obtain the $3000 prize.

Epstein told the police he bought the ticket from Merrill, agent of the Mansfield station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and brought it to Merrill. Merrill and Cashman, who is a baggage-master, went with Epstein to see a third person, John Wally, of Medford the supposed operator of the pool it was charged.

Wally was not home, and a trip there later also failed to find him.

SMITH'S GREAT PEOPLE

Daughter of 'Al' Beats Bridge Expert

New York, Nov. 13—Mrs. Emily Smith Werner, daughter of Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, and three women partners gave the experts a setback at the Vanderbilt Cup bridge competition.

Playing in the preliminaries of the elimination round yesterday, they defeated a team headed by Sidney H. Lenz, 3 points to 2. They used the Culbertson system of contract bridge.

Mrs. Warner's partners were Mrs. Reginald Fincke, Mrs. Speed Elliott and Mrs. J. T. de Milhau. None had ever competed in a tournament of duplicate bridge before.

BROKEN NECK KILLS PLAYER

Deland, Fla., Nov. 13 (AP)—Injuries received in a football game against Stetson here Armistice Day proved fatal today to C. V. Smith, Millsaps College tackle. He died of a fractured neck vertebra after having been unconscious several hours.

Smith had broken through the Stetson line and was almost alone in the backfield when he suddenly collapsed. At first, his condition was not believed serious, but an X-ray revealed the fracture. Yesterday paralysis of the diaphragm set in and physicians resorted to artificial respiration.

BACK TO JAIL IN 'KIDNAPING'

Harry Levy, 23, of Grove st., Boston, just dreamed the story of his kidnaping, according to Plymouth County authorities.

In custody of two deputy sheriffs, Levy was taken back to Plymouth jail today from Marlboro to finish serving his sentence for transporting liquor.

He appeared in Marlboro last night, a week after his disappearance from Jordan Hospital, Plymouth, where as a county prisoner, he had undergone an operation. At Marlboro he told state police he had been spirited away from the hospital by armed men and held prisoner a week.

That was just so much "honey" to the Plymouth County authorities.

NEW AUTO RATES OUT TONIGHT

Commissioner Brown said he thought the agents in the greater Boston zones were required to do more work and so were entitled to more commission.

REFERENDUM PLANNED

Commissioner Brown's opinion that he is required to continue the zone system is at variance with the opinion of Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, who, acting for Mayor Curley, tried to get the commissioner to abolish it.

On many sides there appeared to be a determination to force through a referendum for a flat rate at the next election.

This proposal will be opposed by motorists in the present low rate country districts but proponents of the plan expect the large cities, carrying the burden of the higher rates, will turn out enough voters to effect the change in the system and force a flat rate into effect.

The sole accomplishment of the legislators who prorogued last night was the voting of $245,000 to provide jobs for the unemployed—a vote that cost $139,126.50 in salaries (voted by themselves) and expenses.

That was the view of a flabbergasted, dumbfounded citizenry considering the vote of senators and representatives to pay themselves $400 apiece. They passed that bill

And went home to deposit the $400 in the bank

NO RELIEF FOR AUTOIST

Called into being primarily to afford relief to motorists threatened with an 11 per cent increase in compulsory insurance rates, the Legislature provided no relief and passed only one bill, affecting insurance. That was in favor of the insurance companies.

Consequently, Insurance Commissioner Merton L. Brown is engaged in rushing through the increase to go into effect on January 1.

Governor Ely's emergency appropriation of $245,000, to give work to the needy, was voted. But it cost more than half that amount to vote for it! For every dollar provided for the jobless, each legislator receives something like 50 cents in salary and expenses.

Or, if the cost of the special session is deducted from the amount provided, it is found that only $105,873.50 remains.

But, of course, $245,000 will be spent, and the taxpayers will pay not only that but the $139,126.50 to the Legislature for the privilege of spending it.

In other words, the taxpayer will pay through the proboscis.

Not only that but the money paid the legislators will come out of the general fund to which everybody, not the motorist alone, contributes although the session was called for the relief of the motorist.

THEY HELP CHARITY!

One single voice in the entire House and Senate was raised in protest as the legislators voted themselves $40 0-salary apiece and $400 for President Gaspar G. Bacon and Speaker Leverett Saltonstall.

It was the loud voice of Senator Joseph W. Monahan of Belmont, Democrat, who said the legislators ought to be thoroughly ashamed of themselves.

He served notice that he would give his $400 to charity and the legislators, apparently taking into consideration the welcome charity would give Senator Monahan's $400 immediately passed the salary bill.

Senators and representatives, with the exception of Sen. Monahan, were reticent to state what they intended doing with their $400. Sen. Monahan said he would split his three ways between the Belmont and Cambridge unemployment funds and the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

President Bacon issued a lengthy explanation of the action of the special session with regard to insurance, but did not state what he would do with his $400.

"The legislature represents the prevailing opinion of the whole Commonwealth," he said. "It has been unwilling to change the present law in any material respect because a majority of the people do not want any change.

"The minority must suffer the consequences.

"Until the rates go high enough in a sufficient number of districts to convert a minority into a majority, the present law will probably stand unmodified."

GIRL JILTED FOR OWN SISTER

Salem, Nov. 13—All's fair in love and war!

Ethel Harron, pretty Irish colleen, had been keeping company with Eldon Conrad since she arrived here from the Emerald Isle, for years ago. Everything was just wonderful until—

Four weeks ago, Eldon, who roomed at the home of Mrs. Jane Marandy, Essex st., a relative of Ethel, packed his personal effects and disappeared.

When he returned, he brought with him a bride. Was Ethel angry? Her face was red. Not only that, her "Irish" was aroused when Mr. and Mrs. Conrad came to Mrs. Marandy's house to get a few belongings of the bridegroom.

Words followed the meeting of Ethel and Mrs. Conrad, and a hair-pulling battle was staged, with neutral observers announcing a "draw" decision.

Ethel appeared before Clerk Morgan J. McSweeney and sought an assault warrant for Mrs. Conrad. The clerk refused the complaint, pending police investigation.

Officer John F. Bozek, of the Salem police, reports that no warrant will be necessary. He warned the contestants that pulling hair wasn't nice, and it appears than an armistice has been declared.

By the way, Mrs Conrad's maiden name was Elizabeth Harron. She is Ethel's sister and frequently visited at Mrs Marandy's when Ethel was being courted there by Conrad.

All's fair in love, at least.

CABLE SWINDLE RACKET BARED

The fake cablegram fraud, which was the means of swindling Boston residents of sums of money last May and the year before, has again appeared here, it was learned today from Manager G. L. McAvoy of the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Investigation of the fake cablegrams indicates that the same crooks are attempting to perpetrate their racket on new victims by using forged blanks and envelopes and by writing fictitious messages purporting to be from prominent business and professional men traveling abroad.

The swindlers secure the names from the lists published by the steamship companies, locate the business address of the tourist, call his office and ascertain the name of his secretary or office associate.

A day or two later a fake cablegram is found under the door, carrying the signature of the traveler, indicating that arrangements have been made for the purchase of liquor or smuggled goods.

A State st. attorney yesterday receives a message signed with the name of his law partner, at present abroad.

"Made arrangements for shipment coming through to you from Clarke, who will explain instructions to receive same," it ran. "Handle matter strictly confidential, amount to be paid $780. Arrived Paris today, remaining one week."

Later in the day a man called upon the attorney giving the name of Clarke.

The man said that he had the shipment ready for delivery and requested payment of the $780. The State st. attorney, who readily discerned the fake, refused to have anything to do with the transaction.

The matter has been reported to the police, who have advised that all secretaries of prominent men abroad investigate carefully messages advising payments to unknown men.

THIS IS LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

ONCE IN A WHILE WE READ some story in the news some little story of human personality, involving originality, individualism, will or aspiration—call it what you will—that makes us wonder once again about the parts played by heredity and environment in human behavior. Do we behave as we do because we are the children of our parents? Or is it that our surroundings at an impressionable age make us what we are?

Yesterday we read of an American girl, Nilla Cram Cook, who is resolute to be baptised in the Ganges river, to become a Hindu, to enter the famous Ashram, or community, and become a disciple of Mahatma Gandhi. To do this she is renouncing husband and small son. Already she wears the ancient Greek cosutme, goes barefooted, and is absorbed in the study of ancient Greek and Hindu philosophy. She in only 22.

Easy to say, just another nut! But even assuming that all religious and pilosophical enthusiasts are nuts—which is facile but debatable—why does this girl become this sort of enthusiast? Is it just accident or is there something more comprehensible in it than that?

Idealism in Davenport, Ia.

And one turns to one of the most beautiful and moving pieces of American biographical writing, "The Road to the Temple," the life of George Cram Cook, Nilla's father, by Cook's second wife, the well-known novelist and dramatist Susan Glaspell, author of the Pulitzer prize play "Allison's House."

George Cram Cook was a middle-western mystic of Yankee stock, after the order of Emerson and Thoreau and Swedenborg. His home was in Davenport, Ia. His mother was a pioneer woman, well educated in philosophical literature, a theosophist. In her, one sees that generation of plain-living, high-thinking folk that tried to create Brook Farm, the Oneida Colony, New Harmony, and those other places wherein Utopia was to be born, the child of social reform wedded to transcendentalist philosophy.

At the age of 16 young George, reading the neo-Platonists at high noon in the libarary of the state university at Iowa City, had a vision of the personal presence of God. Later, after he had studied Greek and poetry and philosophy at Harvard and Heidelberg, and tried teaching a little, he went back to the farm, to plough and harvest and write. There for a time he lived in a kind of trance, in which all experiences took on a symbolic importance. He wrote incessantly; but in the busy, materialistic Roosevelt era, what he had to say did not interest America. He became an authority on mystical philosophy. He longed to make Davenport, Ia., the Athens of America. He wanted to create beauty and vital art and social idealism in the American scene.

He Reached Utopia at Delphi

Later, in 1913, he and his wife Susan Glaspell, settled in Provincetown to get away form New York, (Later still, they rettled in Truro, to get away from Provincetown). There Jig Cook and his friends created the Provincetown Theater, which was to give Eugene O'Neill to the American drama. To most of them it was a summer amusement; to Cook it was obviously an almost prayerful experiment in creative living for the sake of American cultural life.

He transplanted the theater to New York toiled enormously over it until it became a success, then dropped it. He was not interested in commercial successes. He and Susan Glaspell went to Greece, the goal of his desire ever since he had first known what Greece meant. He read ancient Greek, he learned modern Greek and translated his writings into that tongue. They lived in Delphi, the friend of the towns-people, the shop-people, the shepherds and farmers.

George Cram Cook, Jig Cook, became "Kyrios Kouk," dressed in heavy tunic, flaring white kilt, white leggins. His hair was snow-white, his beard Sophoclean. He dreamed of writing tragedies in Greek to be performed by the local people on the ruins of the ancient theater. About 50 years old, he died of a disease caught while nursing his pet dog. He, the mystical transcendentalist, was buried with the rites of the Orthodox Church. On his grave was placed, by permission of the Greek government, a stone from the ancient temple of Apollo. The people of Delphia are reviving the Pythian games in his memory.

So "She Walks With a Torch"

There was in Provincetown a little girl named Nilla who watched it all. There was in Delphi a young girl whose Greek was better than her father's and who read the ancient mystics on the runs of the temple of Pythian Apollo. Her grandmother had sought, like Blake, to build Jerusalem, not in the green and pleasant land of England but in the prairies of Iowa. Her father, at Harvard, in Europe, on his vision-haunted farm where he read Nietzsche and raised vegetables and wrote novels of social reform, tried to turn America from her predestined course, and failed. He could fulfill his own vision at Delphi, but that was all. He once wrote to Nilla:

"I wish you were here to pick up some golden fragments of the breakage of my life. My mother failed, but she dared the impossible. I have more richly failed. If you could see how, by a hair's breadth, I miss being a transforming force in the theater of our unrealized nation, Nilla, you would have behind you a great tradition. You would walk with a torch lighting your way."

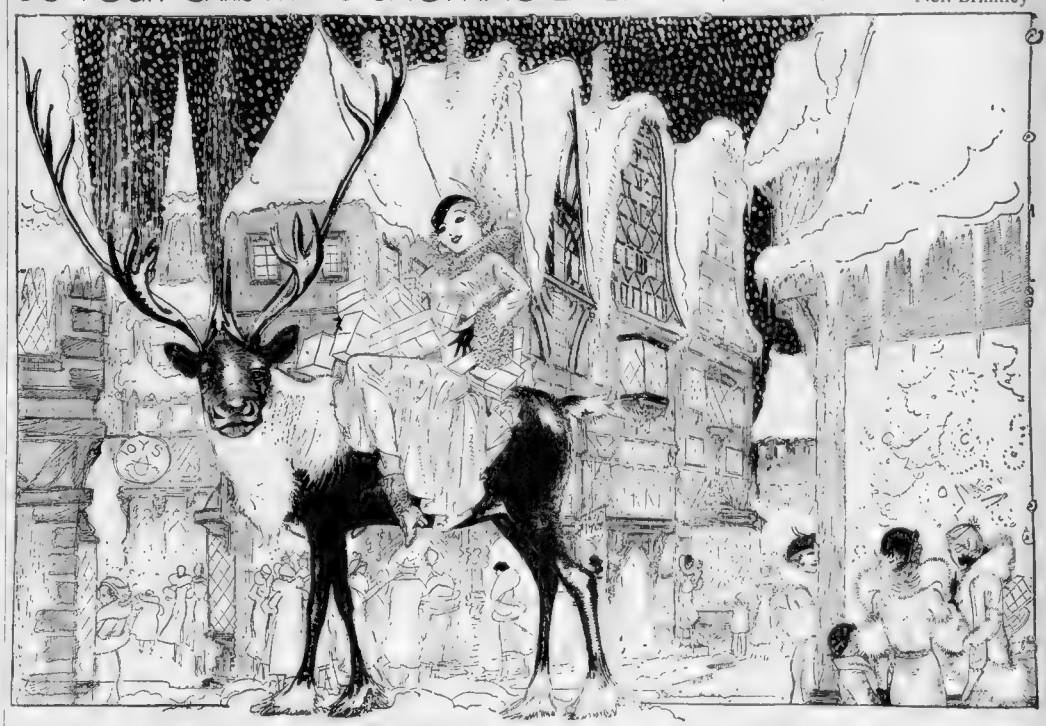
And that, I take it, is why Nilla Cram Cook is renouncing the west and entering Gandhi's Ashram. It is an extraordinarily New England and Yankee thing to do. There is a tremendous amount of the pioneer American spirit in it—before that spirit had been fouled with industrial materialism.

And above all, it is not an accident. It is clearly, as clearly as one is ever likely to see, an inheritance, a carrying forward of the torch. Perhaps it is a retreat and a surrender. But it is a retreat and a surrender which is not without its nobility. Thoreau, I think, would have understood it.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.)

"DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



Slowly, in this year of Nineteen-Thirty-One, that has been strangely hard for some, the Christmas Time has approached. Months ago, just as pictures and stories have told us year after year, reminded us to "do our Christmas shopping early," the knights of the pen did it this year. It seems early even now to remind you. But you girls know how it is. Every year of a lady's life she swears to shop more wisely the next year—but chiefly—to do it SOONER. I have promised myself for ten years, after the ordeal of present-hunting was over, and I had found it not so terrible after all (as when we take an anesthetic, or dive from a spring-board the first time), that the day after New Year I would begin my next Christmas shopping. The day after New Year!

This year there is added to the call to action another sentence Not only are you told to do it early—but just to "do your Christmas shopping!" Those who have money to spare at all, will do it, as they have always done when the time that paints in everyone's mind a certain picture, comes 'round. Bells, holly, scarlet ribbon the green tree with the sparkle and glitter, the tinsel, the presents, the dinner with faces we care for at the table, the best silver, the child or the children "at home," and the grandmothers, too, snow—(perhaps, we hope so, you betcha!), the yellow-lighted streets where the past ages persist and we still feel the old-fashioned town-architecture in spite of the boom of the modern star-scraper! These things are a flock of insistent spirits that overrun the world when Christmas comes along—and the world begins to feel like a person on a Christmas-card, and goes forth to hunt down presents.

The merchants need not worry—the world will shop.

NELL BRINKLEY.

1-WAY TRAFFIC RULE FAVORED

The re-establishment of the one-way rule in Washington and Union between Adams and Haymarket so is strenuously opposed by business men in those streets.

This was shown at the public hearing before the traffic commission yesterday concerning a number of proposed changes in the traffic rules.

Little interest was shown in the proposed changes outside of that concerning Washington st., not one more than a score of persons speaking at the hearing which lasted less than an hour.

Business men in Washington at rounded two-way traffic with parking on both sides. A delegation of business men from Union all registered themselves in favor of two-way traffic with parking. Representative of the Boston Automobile Club and the Motor Truck Association spoke in favor of the one-way street as an aid to speeding up traffic.

A "Lucky" Cop

Patrolman Patrick J. Walsh, officer number 1313 at station No. 13, Jamaica Plain, was appointed to the Boston Police force on Friday, December 13, 1919. How's that for a record. And still, he says he doesn't fear Friday the 13th. (Staff photo.)

FETE PLANNED FOR BURKE

Plans for the inauguration of John H. Burke as mayor of Medford will be made at a meeting of an inauguration committee named today by President James W. Norton of the board of aldermen.

The committee will meet within a week. It is probable that in addition to the usual exercises an inaugural ball will be held this year following the organization exercises.

The committee consists of President James W. Norton as chairman, Alderman John J. Bray, Robert P. Campbell, Robert N. Spofford, Frank I. Fuller and Daniel E. Watson.

Congressman Boland Secretly Married

Washington, Nov 13 (US)—Representative Patrick J. Boland of Scranton, Pa., was secretly married to Miss Bridget V. Barret, of Clarendon, Va., on Oct. 27 it was revealed today.

The Rev. John K. Cartwright, of this city, performed the ceremony. Boland is 51 years old and his bride, 32.

Ou Are Blind if You Can Read This

Cleveland, O., Nov. 13 (US)—Connections between the brain and the eye automatically are broken when one is reading, it has been determined by Frank K. Moss, research engineer in the Lighting Laboratory at Nela Park.

This means, said Moss today, that during these intervals a person actually is blind.

Melrose to Honor Fathers and Sons

Melrose will hold its annual Father and Son night tonight. At 8 15 fathers and sons will be served suppers at the churches and then they will march to Memorial Hall for addresses and entertainment.

WATCH OUT! FRIDAY, 13TH

CATHERINE MADDEN

MARY DE ANGELIS MARY FINN WILFRED BREEN

JINX SUPPOSED TO RULE TODAY

Its here again.

Friday, the 13th and for the third time this year, if that's of any interest to the numerologists.

Day of wrath and day of mourning for the superstitious, but just another Friday to everyone else.

A day to walk softly with crossed fingers for those who believe in pixies, jinks, evil spirits and bad luck generally.

To avoid all signs, omens and portents, such as leaning ladders, black cats and prohibition agents, is considered good policy.

If you put a stocking on wrong side out, by all means let it remain that way unless you wish to bring down the wrath of the evil spirits. The same might apply to hats and shoes.

There are some stout hearts, however, who have no fear of Friday, the 13th. For example there is Mary T. Finn, who is four years old today. Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Finn of 96 South st., Medford, isn't worried about hoodoos or anything except possibly a shortage of "goodies."

"I been waitin' for Friday, the 13th, for a whole year," said Mary earnestly when interviewed. "It's my birthday. I'm goin' to have a party with lots of cake and ice cream and candies and everything."

Then there is Patrolman Patrick J. Walsh of Station 13, Jamaica Plain, who also has no fears. He was appointed to the police department on Friday, the 13th, 1919, is assigned to Station 13, and his number is 1313.

HOOVER ASSURES FULL OPERATION OF BOSTON NAVY YARD

'OLD IRONSIDES' TO REMAIN ON ACTIVE DUTY

Budget Slash Will Not Effect Ships or Personnel, President Says

The campaign of the Boston Evening American, supported by state and civic leaders and Boston business men, against the proposed closing of the Boston navy yard, was successfully concluded today following announcement from Washington that the yard would be maintained in full operation.

The report came with President Hoover's announcement that the navy budget for 1932 would call for only $343,000,000, but that the American fleet would not suffer the loss of a single ship or man, that no navy yards would be closed and that "Old Ironsides" would be retained in commission.

The budget sought, represents a reduction of $17,000,000 from last year's appropriation and of $53,000,000 under the $401,000,000 asked by the Navy Department.

Leaders in Boston's fight to prevent the closing of the Navy Yard expressed pleasure today at the first definite word from President Hoover that their efforts had met with success.

Mayor Curley, Congressman John J. Douglass, in whose district the yard is located, President Richard S. Teeling, of the Association for the maintenance of the Navy Yard, civic and business leaders and representatives of veteran and patriotic organizations joined today in praising the decision of President Hoover and congratulating the people of Massachusetts and New England on their support in the fight.

The mayor said he was "delighted" when informed of the President's announcement. He pointed out that the decision of the President was without doubt the result of the co-operative effort of the people of this section for the interests of the whole community without regard to political considerations.

Congressman Douglass expressed his pleasure in behalf of the employes of the yard, whose jobs were assured by the decision of the President. He congratulated the citizens who rallied in the support of the yard and predicted the President's decision would benefit not only the yard but the Port of Boston as well.

PAROLE BOARD STUDIES FATE OF SAMMARCO

Mrs. Marangi Repeats Charge That Dead Husband Was Slayer of Officer

The fate of Joseph Sammarco, serving a life sentence for the murder of Patrolman William G. Clancy in Roughan's Hall, Charlestown, January 2, 1920, will be decided today when the State Parole Board goes into executive session to act on his petition for pardon.

At a hearing before the parole board yesterday in Charles st. jail, Sammarco denied emphatically that he was the slayer of the police officer, who on the night of the murder was on duty at a dance.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT

The board, which includes Frank A. Brooks, Seymour H. Stone, Mathew Bullock and Asst Atty-Gen. Stephen Ruggiulpo, after a discussion of the testimony given yesterday for and against the pardon, will make a confidential report to the Governor.

The key-witness for Sammarco was Mrs. Theresa Marangi, 45, of Puritan rd., Somerville, who dramatically declared that Patrolman Clancy was slain by her dead husband, Frank "Chief" Maranci, former gang leader and racketeer.

CROWLEY OPPOSES

"Frank (Mrs. Marangi's husband), came home after the murder and said, 'I couldn't help it. He got me mad. I killed Clancy,'" Mrs. Marangi related.

"A short time later Frank was making a collection for Sammarco's trial. I said, 'You're pretty interested in this case.' Frank said, 'Why shouldn't I be? He's taking the blame for me!'"

Among those opposing the pardon were William B. Clancy, father of the slain officer, and Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley.

MYSTIC HOLDS GIRL'S HANDS, EASES PROBLEMS AT CUT RATES

VANISHING ACT SPECIAL FOR SLEUTH

By HAZEL LEWIS

For 50 cents—a cut rate, and you—you can have your hand held and your problems "psychically diagnosed" by C. Walter Stanell, alias Charles Ginsberg.

That is you can if he comes back.

After giving me his mediumistic advice, he vanished while Inspector John F. Mitchell of the attorney general's office was on his way to question Ginsberg about the mysterious part he allegedly played in the affairs of William H. Hood and Mrs. Lillian Fields.

IN FRAUD PROBE

Hood is charged with tricking the Brookline widow out of $43,500 in a spirit fraud. She says Ginsberg came to her with $10,000 to quit prosecuting Hood.

But when she learned later that $5000 more had melted away en route to her door, she launched action which brought about Hood's arrest in California after a four years' hunt directed by Inspector Mitchell.

"What you need, my dear, young lady, is a mature mind like mine to help stabilize you," said the psychic Mr. Stanell, alias Ginsberg, when I was ushered into his sanctum on Huntington ave.

"You can be a great actress some day if you concentrate enough on the idea," he added.

I had to wait more than three hours for Mr. Stanell in his outer office. Three women, anxious to take advantage of the special offer of only 50 cents for a "regular $5.00 reading" were waiting when I got there.

One of the women confided to me that she had been going with a man for nine years and he hadn't proposed.

ATMOSPHERE MISSING

There was none of the so-called mediumistic atmosphere about the office. A small incense burner, which Mr. Stanell evidently had not had time to light, was the only item in the room which distinguished it from a physician's office in appearance. Mr. Stanell's appearance, too, was somewhat disappointing. He did not look the least bit "psychic."

"Now put yourself at ease—and make yourself comfortable," he said. "I want to help you. Have you ever been to a medium of any kind before?"

I admitted that I had never before had any serious problems to solve.

He placed my left hand on a sheet of paper and traced around it with a pencil. Then he took my hand in his and examined the lines.

THERE'S A REASON

"You have very unusual hands, my dear," he told me.

He held my hand for a few minutes, squeezing my fingers. I began to understand why so many middle aged ladies went to him with their "problems."

He asked me to write the three questions that were troubling me most on a slip of paper, and to sign my name. Then he took the paper, folded it up small and placed it beside him.

"It is very necessary for me to know exactly how old your father is, in days, months and years. Here, figure it out, and take your time."

I was supposed to bury my nose in a sheet of paper for a few minutes. I did pretend to. Stanell quickly took up the slip of paper on which I had written my questions and replaced it with another. He opened it behind a large board on which he also had the picture of my hand he had previously drawn.

"Now take hold of my hand and press it very tightly. Concentrate on the questions—concentrate."

Stanell shut his eyes. I noticed that he had polish on his fingernails. I thought, "This man must think I'm pretty stupid."

PROMISES TO HELP

"Now," he said, "I am prepared to answer your questions. You want to go on the stage, don't you?"

I bashfully admitted that it has always been my secret ambition to be a great actress. Then I told Stanell that I was not afraid to go to New York to wait for a "break" because I had plenty of money of my own to keep me comfortably no matter how long I remained unemployed.

"Do you know that the lines in your hands indicate that you will be a success on the stage? You are a very beautiful girl and have just the sort of personality that they want on the American stage. But you are mentally unsettled." (I decided not to take offense at this last.) "You need me to help you. You need the association of older men. Are you alone a great deal?"

I told him that I knew very few people in Boston and was living alone in Brookline.

"I shall see that you meet the right kind of people. You must not be alone and you must not worry. Leave everything to me and you will become a great actress. When can you come to see me again?"

I made an appointment with the advisor for today at three and then he took me to the door. This time he smiled and cheerfully said:

"Don't worry, I'm going to make you very happy."

"Don't Speak to Me"... Do You Feel This Way?

Grouchy Irritable Wives!

"DON'T speak to me," she cries, "I'm all upset and want to be alone."

Why is it...as soon as a woman's nerves become excited she hurts the ones she loves?

She has no patience with anybody. Everything seems to make her unhappy...despondent.

B. C. DEBATERS SCORE CAPITAL

Capital was assailed by the Fulton Debating Society of Boston College, discussing the recent wage cuts by large factories.

Wage reductions always bring about an increase in production and capital having its reserve is better equipped to care for itself in depression than labor, which barely lives in ordinary times declared the debaters, at their meeting yesterday.

It was maintained by the other side that capital always has its rights and that labor is not justified in demanding too large a wage in that every time there is a wage reduction the cost of living goes down in proportion.

STUDENTS AID UNEMPLOYED

Harvard, Radcliffe and M. I. T. students are planning to aid the Cambridge unemployment committee in raising their $150,000 winter relief fund.

The student councils of the colleges have appointed committees to confer with the Cambridge officials next week to devise a plan for raising money among the students.

With nearly $10,000 already raised the Cambridge committee stated yesterday that the first group of unemployed to benefit from the fund would start work near Mystic on a development of Fresh Pond reservation.

Bridal of Melrose Girl Kept Secret for 18 Months

A wedding performed 18 months ago and kept secret since was announced today in Melrose by Dr. and Mrs. William B. Osgood, prominent in the social life of that city, whose daughter, Miss Mary Calton Osgood became the bride of George L. Freese of Bristol, N. H. The ceremony was performed May 8, 1930, at Manchester, N. H. by Rev. Harry O. Martin of that city.

KIN OF 2 MEN ARE SOUGHT

Relatives and friends of two men who died suddenly in their homes are being sought today by the Boston police.

Frank A. Jean, 50, a lodger at 31 Wilkes st., South End, was found unconscious by another roomer and was pronounced dead on the arrival of a physician.

Robert Thompson, 45, was found dead in bed in his room in a lodging house at Bowdoin st., West End. According to other lodgers the dead man had a sister and brother who reside in Foxboro.

FIREBUG BUSY IN QUINCY

A firebug, who has been busy in Quincy for the past two weeks, was sought with renewed vigor today after he set fire to the summer home of Charles E. Kelley of Melrose on Ocean ave., Squantum.

One fireman, John W. Tobin of Engine 2 was injured while fighting the blaze. The firebug set fire to the cottage in several places and before members of the fire department arrived the entire rear of the cottage was afire.

Marry-Go-Round

WHEN LOVE WAS LOVE—NOT SEX-APPEAL

By HELEN ROWLAND

ONCE IN A WHILE, I like to read a good, old-fashioned mid-Victorian novel. YOU know the type! A novel with a hero and a villain and a persecuted woman in it

The kind of mellow old book that transports you far from the Modding Machine Age back to the good old peaceful, tranquil, unconfusing days, when virtue was virtue and sin was sin—and there were no two arguments about it!

When you KNEW that you were good—or that you were bad; and did not have to go to a psychoanalist to learn the latest fashion of morals, or to discover whether your passion for making a fool of yourself was an inhibition or just plain cussedness.

When all the good women were plump and blonde—and all the wicked ones were dusky-eyed and sensuous. And all the villains wore fierce black mustaches—and all the heroes were lovely curling mustaches.

When love was love—not a matter of sex-appeal or a psychopathic problem or a fixation, or a complex

When murder was murder—not "paranoea." And a villain was a villain—not a "mental defective," or a "victim of society" or a "popular racketeer."

When you could tell a chorus girl from a debutante and a grandmother from a flapper, without putting up your lorgnettes. And it was perfectly proper for a woman to be middle-aged; and no disgrace in her fall. And you didn't have to hire a gigolo to trail around after you, in order to prove that you were still in your dancing days.

When a lady was a "lady"—not a "parasite." And a saloon was a saloon—not a speakeasy. And a gentleman was a man who could "hold his liquor," his job, his temper and his wife, with equal success.

Ah, yes—those were the dear, delightful, untroubled days! When right was right and wrong was wrong—and everything was perfectly simple and plain and obvious!

When life was not a perpetual question, with a new answer every morning; but a dead certainty, with an inevitable Heaven or Hell at the end!

The pleasant, torpid, tranquil, unhurried age of the horse-and-buggy, the plush sofa, the Gibson Girl, and the Dominant Male! The good old days B. F. and B. P. and B. G. —Before Feminism, Before Prohibition and Before Gasoline!

"Devil's Food" Cake Cooked in School

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

FAR TOO GOOD for any horned gentleman was the Devil's Food Cake with toasted marshmallows that was made in the Martha Lee Cooking School this week. Not only was it mostly delicious and attractive in appearance, topped with golden, toasted marshmallows, but it was exceptionally reasonable, requiring only a tablespoon of butter and 1 egg, a cup of dark brown sugar, a cup of sour milk, a cup and a half of flour, 2 tsps. of baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 2 squares of chocolate and ½ tsp. of soda.

First the egg was beaten well and to it we added 1 cup of medium brown sugar and ½ cup of sour milk, and if you haven't any sour milk on hand, it is easy to make by adding 2 tbsps. of mild vinegar or lemon juice to cup of [illegible] and a warm place for an hour. The egg, sugar and milk were let stand together until the sugar was completely dissolved. Meanwhile we sifted 1 cup and one-half measured cup and one-half of flour with 2 tsps. of baking powder and ½ tsp. of salt and added 1½ of the egg mixture.

Two squares of bitter cooking chocolate were shaved and melted with 1 tbsp. of butter over hot water and added to the other ingredients. And last of all another ¼ cup of sour milk in which ¼ tsp. of soda was dissolved. This made a very thin batter which was poured into a shallow pan in which we usually bake jelly rolls. This gave us a cake about an inch thick when baked.

We baked it in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for about 25 minutes, and then turned it out onto a cake rack, and while it was still warm, we placed marshmallows in rows on the cake and put it into the broiler with a low flame until the marshmallows were toasted a golden brown and were puffy and soft. This cake was served at once while warm.

BASHFUL GIRL

BY HARRIET HENRY

Lola Hears Story of Marquis

IT WAS the youth of the spectacles whom she had meet at the Mannings'. Color crept into her face. She felt as if a detective was suddenly spying on her.

"Why, Ernest," she murmured, "I didn't know Nolly's Doctor Price was you."

"No," he said. "It makes it difficult."

This remark was ambiguous

"You know how lucky you are," Venice succeeded in say. She had no misgivings as to Nolly's marrying him, but she wished that Ernest did not invariably seem to me below the surface of her.

"And I didn't save you in time," he said gravely.

"From the blight of society."

"Is it a blight?" asked Mrs. Spalding.

"Venice will be able to tell you so one of these days," Ernest assured her, helping Nolly to settle herself in a chair.

Unpacking the next morning Venice became fairly ecstatic over her new clothes. The jangling of the telephone startled her.

"Hello."

"Hello, Venice. Welcome home."

"Oh, Lola! How are you? And innumerable thanks to you and Jerry for the roses."

"Rien, darling. May I come to lunch with you today? I'm pining to see you and I simply have to hear about the Marquis' suicide and that American he spoke of."

"Come along," said Venice. She knew a vague resentment at Lola's evident enjoyment of the gossip about her. She regards me as a naughty peep-show, she reflected humorously, and wants to be the first to get a look inside.

The receiver back in its place, her eyes wandered to the small lacquered figures on the footboard of her bed still patiently crossing their bridges and carrying their long poles. Their minute stolidity knew no surprise or prodding curiosity about her. It pleased her to imagine that their indefinite little faces looked brighter for her return.

Lola blew in about 1 o'clock.

"I'm so glad to see you, darling." She kissed Venice in her careless, exuberant way.

"It's nice, Lola. And you look more purpling than ever."

"Luncheon is served." Nora at the door with her habitual air of I-am-dying-but-don't-think-much-of-it.

"What about Rene de Thenardier? Did he ask you to marry him?"

"Yes," said Venice. She was hating this. It seemed so crude and unnecessary. But it was necessary.

"How could you resist" He was most attractive, and think of being the Marquise de Thenardier!"

"I didn't love him."

"Well, of course I can see that. But it must have been a temptation."

"No."

"Oh, darling, you'll be a dud all your life if you're not careful."

"I'll be careful." Venice laughed dryly. How very careful she was being.

"Did he kill himself right in front of you?"

Nora was standing just inside the dining-room screen. Her large mouth was hanging a little open. Her eyes stared at Venice as though she had never noticed her before

"Practically," said Venice, "I'd just turned away and I heard something on the window-sill. I looked around and he was gone. The pens, please, Nora." At least she had repaid the servant for her tolerant indifference.

Nora started and crimsoned.

"Yes, Miss Venice." There was actually awe in her tones. She looked at her young mistress with new respect

Venice mentally grinned Even servants responded to the mystery of a past

"My Godfrey," cried Lola, wasn't it horrible?"

"Pretty awful, yes."

There was a silence.

"It's funny," reflected Lola, "here you were, Venice, stuck at parties and coming home alone from lots of them, and a dashing Marquis, who could have had any number of women, kills himself because you won't marry him."

"But he didn't exactly," said Venice. She was fearfully broke and his debts drove him to it."

"That's what you say, darling. But the truth will out. Perhaps you've been fooling us all along."

"Perhaps."

"And do you remember the day you admitted to me you were a complete flop?"

"Yes, I was thinking of it just a moment ago. Perhaps I still am, Lola." She mustn't be too sure of herself.

"Hey, hey! I always had plenty of attention but do you think any Marquis will kill himself for me?"

"The best part of me is probably hidden deep. Very far below the surface," Venice said. She had a vague idea that Lola would repeat this.

She did. Venice sensed it was like an advertising slogan for certain food products.

As Lola departed she asked Venice to a house-warming the following Sunday. Venice accepted with keen appreciation. Her first encounter in the social arena since Guy had given her a cloak of rumor to throw about the shoulders of her diffidence.

(Copyright, Barrett Henry)

Will Venice be successful at the house-warming, tomorrow? She finds there—Roland Wainwright.

A NEW WORTH SUCCESS

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Success of the Operation Lies With Patient

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

RECENTLY I had a letter from a man requesting advice as to whether he should be operated on for hernia. He said he was sixty-two years of age and in excellent health. He had been wearing a truss without much benefit.

Hernia is not a disease and is not caused by infection. It is due to a lack of strength in certain muscles of the body. The muscles are weak at birth, or become so as a result of severe manual work. The muscles affected are those of the abdomen and groin

Hernia is common in lumbermen and others who daily exert themselves in physical work. Lifting and straining in any calling may produce it. It is most common in elderly people.

Of course, the wearing of the truss will never cure hernia. In fact, it is the belief of many surgeons that in some cases the truss does more harm than good Instead of strengthening the muscles, the truss weakens them and may even exaggerate the hernia

The question of operation is not one I care to discuss. Every such case is a law unto itself. There are arguments for and against every operative measure. An honest, conservative, experienced physician should be consulted. After a careful examination on his part, an examination as to the seriousness of the hernia and particularly as to the state of the general health, will enable him to advise what is best to do in your particular case. Needless to say, if you can safely get rid of the annoyance and dangers of a hernia it is sensible to do so

Daily True Story

The Love Knockout

DAN MALONEY sat in his quarters on the third floor of Mrs. MacKinney's rooming house with his head pressed into his hot palms, trying to think it all out. For upstanding Dan Maloney, who had worn his fireman's medal for bravery with such an air, was sunk in despair.

Dan believed his heart was broken beyond repair. And the one who had dealt him that blow was Celia Doyle—Celia, with her sunset hair, eyes blue as the Mediterranean, teeth such as no Oriental pearl fisherman had ever dragged from the depths of the sea.

Of course Celia had been aided and abetted by Jim Danks—the same Jim who once had been pal to Dan; Jim, who had so much more self-assurance, so much more ready cash than Dan

Yes, before Jim had appeared on the scene from nowhere; had gone around with Dan and had met Celia, everything had been like a song in spring, for Celia was virtually promised to Dan, simply waiting for the time when Good Luck would put her hand on Dan's broad shoulder and grant him promotion.

Dan rose, paced the room, went twice to the door with the idea of plunging down the stairway, confronting the purloiner of his happiness, gupping him with his strong hands and pummelling him as he rightly deserved for this wretched larceny of a girl's heart.

STARTS TO PACK

But wiser thoughts prevailed. Dan sat down again, bitter, morose. "What would be the use?" he asked himself

"If she hadn't wanted him she wouldn't have taken him.. It was all over so far as he was concerned. He was out in the cold. And the traitor, Danks, was on the way to wedding one of the sweetest girls ever born."

Suddenly Dan arose, the line of his jaw tightening with determination. He told himself he couldn't stay here any longer—not with "that traitor" under the same roof. He'd pack tonight: he'd get out—out of here, out of the city. He must go far away, try to forget. It would be torture to stay here, always reminded of the girl he had lost.

Then he fully recovered his senses. Someone was climbing the stairs, hurriedly excitedly. In another moment his door was thrown open. There stood Mrs. MacKinney, breathing in gasps.

For a moment she could not speak then: "Oh, Mr. Maloney, the house is on fire! I—I didn't know what to do, so I came to you. Please do something; it'll ruin me, Mr. Maloney to have a fire.

"Fire — fire where?" almost shouted Dan. "Why didn. you run out and give the alarm? Never walk—"

DANKS' ROOM AFIRE

"Why—why, Mr. Maloney, I think it's Mr. Danks' room that's afire. You see, he came in smoking a cigarette, coma in late and he acted to me as though he'd been drinking. He does, you know, in those night clubs. I happened to be wakeful and I came up through the hall. There's smoke coming from under his door, Mr. Maloney. Please do something."

"Better get down and out yourself," shouted Dan, rushing to the door. "This old place is something of a fire trap."

With the words he was gone down the stairway, through the increasing smoke.

Mrs. MacKinney panted along at his heels. At Danks' room Dan paused

"Come out," he shouted. "Open that door or you'll be burned alive" Dan pounded on the panel. Listened. All he could hear was a crackling noise. "Have to break it in," he muttered. "I've got along down stairs, Mrs. MacKinney. It isn't safe."

But the landlady stood there stubornly, watching. Dan drew back and, with his shoulder as a ram, struck the door like a football tackle. Twice he did this before the lock splintered and the wood gave way, almost precipitating him into the room.

Through the cloud of smoke he saw Danks drowsing in a chair. Dan seized him by the shoulder. "Come out of here," he cried. "What's the matter with you, anyway?"

"No man can put me outa here," snarled Danks. "Oh, it's you, eh? Jealous, eh? Wants fight me, I see. I tell you to get out, see? Get no business here."

The clang of the fire engines was heard in the street. Some one had already seen the drifting smoke and turned in an alarm.

Dan stood over his rival, gasping. "Coming?" he said desperately.

RECEIVES LETTER

"Well, if you won't, you won't," muttered Dan. He drew back his right arm, doubled his fist, aimed for the jaw and shot the blow home.

Danks crumpled in the chair as Mrs. MacKinney, coughing and gasping in the hall, uttered a cry of surprised alarm.

Dan threw the unconscious form over his shoulder and, herding Mrs. MacKinney to the front door, got her and his burden to the steps and down to the street with the fairest at their heels and the landlady weeping and wailing

Dan, with one hand bandaged and part of his face in a dressing, sat in the fire-house, an unopened letter in his hand. At length he slit the envelope with his knife and spread the sheet before him. He passed his good hand before his eyes like a man in a daze as he saw first the signature at the bottom of the page

Dan brought the sheet closer and read

"Dan Dear: Can you ever forgive me? Probably not. I don't deserve it, of course. But my red head is full of you, Dan, and my heart quite as full. I have learned what you did the other night at the risk of your own life. Mrs. MacKinney came to me and told me the story. She said you saved 'him' for me, Danny. Well, you needn't have done it. I didn't want him. I'll admit that, through his blarney, I did come near to accepting him—angels, forgive me for that—but I learned in time his true colors and found out what a fool I had been to think of him seriously for a minute.

"If you can forgive me, Danny, I'll promise to be good. You had never really lost me, Danny, it was just a moment of madness. There is no room in my heart, honey, for anyone but you, yourself. This is the confession of a penitent and loving Celia."

Danny folded the letter carefully and put it tenderly in his pocket.

"It's a grand old world," he said to himself with a one-sided smile, "even if it does play tricks on you once in awhile."

Entertain Her, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

There a girl in the same office with me and, to put it plainly, I'm in love with her. We don't see much of each other because she's not the kind that's easy—and I like her all the better for that. We met by chance at the house of a friend and I took her home. After that she dined with me twice, and that's the extent of our dates.

The other day I happened to meet her in the elevator and, swept off my feet, I said: "What are you doing this evening?"

"Nothing in particular," she said—and I thought she acted sort of high hat. So no more was said. Now I know it was not well bred to ask her what she had on hand because, if she didn't accept my invitation, it left her no loophole of escape. Since then we've not seen anything of each other and have been acting rather cool. I'm miserable. What do you think should be my next move?

FRED.

Dear Fred: Don't waste any more time splitting hairs, my dear Fred. When you asked the girl what she was doing that evening, and she answered "Nothing in particular," she expected you to invite her out. That you didn't left her up in the air. Just tell her you're sorry that things didn't go off well that evening and will she go out to a shore-dinner-hand concert — whatever fancy dictates tonight, tomorrow, or whenever it's convenient?

Picking Tomorrow's Winners Tough Job

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year
When football experts make their picks, a-trembling and with fear,
The set-ups have been harvested—like Penn and Notre Dame—
—DAN PARKER.

Redad, we're all a-tremble, Dan, as we pick Holy Cross
To humble haughty John Harvard and toss him for a loss;
Dartmouth-Cornell—I yell! I yell!—should be a close-fought game,
We'll flip a coin and pick the Red to pull a Notre Dame.

As far as goes Columbia and Little Rhody's Brown,
Why Leominster Lou's *Professionals should win by lone touchdown;
Colgate will lose to Syracuse and Army fall 'fore Pitt.

The Rock of Notre Dame is gone, but Navy should be sunk
And scuttled clean from stem to stern by crew now coached by Hunk;
This blooming song may turn out wrong, but one bet we will lay,
'Tis Yale and B. C. will not lose, for neither team will play!

*According to Columbia Spectator.

Dartmouth led a flock of home-grown boys into the Stadium last Saturday and failed by the skin of its teeth of beating Harvard . . . But just look at the home-grown team Holy Cross will shoot against the Crimson tomorrow . . . Here it is . . . Ends, Tony Colucci of Woburn and Jim Cavalieri of East Boston; tackles, Jim Ryan, Brookline High; Fred Drescher, Lowell High, and Jim Flanagan, Portland High; guards, Ignatius Zyntell, Boston English, and Jack Baironus, Brockton high; center, Eddie Bergin, Somerville; captain and quarterback, Phil O'Connell, Brockton High; halfback, Marty Murray, Springfield; fullback, Leslie Griffin, Everett High . . . On the sidelines, ready to go in as replacements, will be, end, Johnny Callahan, former Malden high captain; guard, Bill Carnicelli, Winthrop; tackle, Jim Lyons, Newburyport; centers, Jerry Griffin, Medford, and George Bruso, Worcester; backs, Bob Donovan of Natick, son of the late "Piper" Donovan, first man to do 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds; Bill Coakley of Augusta and Walter Clifford of Roslindale.

John Harvard has a flock of home-grown huskies to hurl against them . . . Among the New Englanders Eddie Casey has ready for use are Capt. Barry Wood and Charlie Cunningham of Milton, George Talbot and George Bennett of Hingham, Roger Hallowell of Readville, Vahan Moushegian and Jack Healey of Lowell, Gerard Cassedy, Mal Bancroft and Bill Brooks of Cambridge; Johnny Dean of Cohasset, Shereschewsky and Finlayson of Belmont, Gene Record, Henry Myerson and Dick Werner of Brookline; Carl Pescosolido and Francis Gleason of Newton, Dave Kopans of Roxbury, Bob Faxon of Quincy, Bernie White of Watertown, Pete Reeb of Melrose, Ira Hardy of Waltham, Francis Crane of Everett, Bob Lowe of Lexington and Francis Kales, Dick Waters and Warren Casey of Boston . . . Like the Harvard-Dartmouth game, the Harvard-Holy Cross battle will be a civil war.

Baseball has its unemployed, too . . . George Sisler, Ray Schalk, Casey Stengel, Zach Wheat, Mike Donlin, Carson Bigbee, Cy Barger, Wilbur Cooper, Tommy Griffiths, Chick Fraser, Otto Williams and Nick Allen are among the baseball luminaries who have written Max Carey, new Brooklyn manager, applying for positions of coach . . . Schalk's application divulged the fact that he had been turned loose by Rogers Hornsby, with whom he served as lieutenant last year . . . Turkey Mike Donlin, Idol of the Bleacherites, knew he could "kill" the ball! . . . When his sweetheart-pal-wife Mabel Hite died Mike aged 10 years in one . . . Remember Cy Barger and his "chaw" . . . Tommy Griffiths was a great fielder, but you should hear him warble "Sweet Adeline" . . . That closed door hotel room fight between Casey Stengel and tough guy Ed Appleton . . . The bawling out Mrs. Wheat gave us for saying Zach was part Cree Injun . . . Which he is and should be proud of . . . Why is it all women think their husband's forbears came over on the Mayflower? . . . Gosh what a shipload that boat must have carried!

Some of the boys are afraid that Jack Dorval will do a lot of holding when he crawls through the ropes against Ernie Schaaf in the Scrap of the Season here next Thursday night, but Ernie says he'll not play any June bride to Dorval's hugs . . . There's one sure way, Ernie says, to stop 'em hugging . . . The answer, says Ernie, is "sock 'em!" . . . Good boy, Ernie, that's the slogan that brought Jack Dempsey to the top . . . Stallers, clinchers, huggers, sluggers, clever guys, they all fell before the Dempsey wallop . . . "The only place I will hold Schaaf," promises Dorval, "is on the canvas for the full count with a sock on the chin!" . . . Jack means business this time . . . Never saw him so warlike . . . "My boss, Jack Sharkey, never will fight Dempsey, if I can get Dempsey first!" says Schaaf . . . Plenty of experts will concur in the opinion . . . Schaaf is right in runnerup position among the heavies . . . What a glorious chance for Dorval . . . One TNT slam in the right spot and Dorval will supplant Schaaf as THE contender.

Keep your eye on young Bob Quimby of Dartmouth in the freshmen race at the college cross-country championships in New York next Monday . . . He's the kid Hayray Cohn says is a second John Paul Jones . . . Boxing commissions finally are getting wise to the fact the only way to cure 'em is to sock 'em in the pocket book . . . That's where Maxey Rosenbloom and Jim Braddock were rocked by the Wisconsin board . . . Joe McKenney showed good judgment in calling off practice until next Monday for the B. C. squad . . . Showed signs of staleness . . . Three days' rest will snap them back . . . Tommy Loughran and Paolino fight tonight in N. Y. . . . Because we like Tom we wish he would quit . . . Even winning .6 has to take severe punishment now . . . Don't want to see a fellow like Tommy Loughran walking on his heels.

Steffen to Quit Carnegie Berth

Chicago, Nov. 13—Judge Walter "Wally" Steffen, for 18 years football coach at Carnegie Tech, will retire after the conclusion of the present season, he announced today. Steffen has long wanted to withdraw from coaching, due to the pressure of business, but the lure of the game has in other years proven too strong for him to resist.

Williams Squad in Final Hard Work

Williamstown, Nov. 13—The final hard workout was given to the Williams team in preparation for the final game with Amherst here, when the "little three" championship is decided tomorrow. A short signal drill will be held today.

Loughran Fights Uzcudun Tonight

Loughran is expected to have difficulty with the tough Basque, who can make things very unpleasant for the Philadelphian if he gets inside Tommy's lightning left.

Vermont Varsity Battles Freshmen

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 13—Coach Dunn sent Vermont varsity men against the freshmen and the former had a tough time.

Larry Bowers and Slow Manning are rested, and although Bowers is far from being in top shape, Manning will help the team.

ule tomorrow, with promising clashes listed in every section except the far west. Some of these games are major contests because of the tradition behind them. Others are major contests because they have all the elements of great football games.

The East is particularly fortunate in its gridiron schedulings. Army and Pittsburgh, Holy Cross and Harvard, Dartmouth and Cornell, Lafayette and Penn State, Brown and Columbia, New York U. and Fordham, Notre Dame and Navy and Syracuse and Colgate are just a few of the games which will be decided in this sector.

The Harvard-Holy Cross game has attracted unusual interest in New England. Harvard is undefeated and Holy Cross which lost to Dartmouth, tied Fordham and defeated Brown 33-0, is conceded to have an even chance of breaking the Crimson victory string. Holy Cross has a fine team. It defeated Harvard 27-0 a year ago and is reputed to be even a stronger team this year. Undoubtedly this should be one of the fine games of the year.

Green Underdog Against Cornell

Dartmouth probably will be an underdog going into the game with Cornell. I do not think however, that Cornell will make the mistake of underrating this Dartmouth team. It may have no running attack, but it has a team that can do a lot of damage to the other fellow's running attack. Dartmouth beat Holy Cross. It lost to Columbia. It tied Yale 33-33 and it gave Harvard a nerve wracking afternoon before the Crimson could win 7-6 in the closing minutes of play. Cornell of course has a fine running attack. It has been strong against passes too.

Dartmouth will find Ferraro and Viviano hard backs to handle, and Cornell will do well to protect against Dartmouth's overhead game. On paper Cornell has the edge. As the game actually turns out, Dartmouth may have Cornell on pins and needles all afternoon. If Dartmouth ever gets that power, harnessed, some team will suffer.

Pittsburgh, beaten only by Notre Dame and an outstanding team in the East plays Army at Pittsburgh. Army has been defeated by Harvard. The Cadets have come along nicely in the last two weeks and will press Pitt all the way. Pittsburgh would seem to have the more power, but Army will be a hard team to defeat. A small score to game might tell the story.

Columbia on its past record rates a win over Brown, though Lon Little will have three of his men out of the game. Brown is doubtful also about using Rotelli, Ball and Buonanno. Columbia has lost only to Cornell and should win this one. Pennsylvania looks able to recover from its decisive defeat by Notre Dame and come back to defeat Georgia Tech. Colgate and Syracuse are well matched with Syracuse undefeated and Colgate looking back only on its 13-0 defeat by New York University. Colgate has the edge.

Fordham-N. Y. U. Game Is Tossup

The Fordham-New York University game is a tossup. A year ago Fordham won 7-0, and under Major Cavanaugh's able direction has not been beaten this year. Fordham was tied by Holy Cross, but had the punch to come from behind and even up the Holy Cross six points. New York University has been defeated in its last two starts by Georgia and Oregon. The breaks either way probably will decide the game.

Notre Dame should have no difficulty with Navy in the game to be played at Baltimore. Since its early season tie with Northwestern, Notre Dame has looked better every Saturday and Coach Anderson and his assistants have done a wonderful job. This looks like one of the greatest of Notre Dame teams.

Princeton, defeated in its last five starts may swing back into the victory path tomorrow, but Washington and Lee will bother the Tiger. The Generals have won three games and lost by a touchdown to Navy which defeated Princeton. It may be a close one, and Princeton will have to play its best football of the year to pull it out.

Two games are outstanding in the South. Georgia and Tulane, undefeated elevens, meet in one of the best games of the country. Georgia has scored 147 points this season to opponents' 26 and has defeated Yale, Vanderbilt and New York University among others. Tulane has rolled up 216 points and has been

This combination finds Griffin and Rovinski in strange settings. McEwan also shifted O'Connell to the right wing, alternating with Rovinski. Jarvis was on the ice to relieve in a playing possibility against Harvard.

McEwan had a long dummy scrimmage against Harvard plays, put on by the Crusader third eleven.

The first eleven was composed of Bergin, center; Zyntell and Baironus, guards; Ryan and Reiss, tackles; Colucci and Cavalieri, ends, and O'Connell, Rovinski, Murray and Griffin, backs.

Donovan also alternated with Rovinski and O'Connell.

Squash Schedule Is Set for Season

The schedule of the Massachusetts Squash Racquet Association was decided at a meeting at which Walter Badger presided.

The class A division will be made up of teams from the Harvard Club, Harvard University, Lincoln Inn, Union Boat Club and a team from Newton Centre.

All classes except D will play in one division this season, with all leagues starting play on December 5.

Holy Cross in a Nutshell

By BILL GRIMES

ENDS

Tony Colucci and Jim Cavalieri, Grand Opera Twins almost identical in weight, height and ability; Greater Boston products; Tony from Woburn; Jim from Noddle Island; Colucci finally arrived at Mt. St James via the Woburn high, Lake Forest Academy, Dartmouth route; Cavalieri bolted from East Boston high to St. John's Prep and then cut back to "The Cross"; both are seniors; watch 'em, folks, they are great.

TACKLES

GUARDS

Jim Zyntell and Jack Baironus; Jim is an All American prospect; probably next captain; came from English high; grabbed a regular berth last fall; six feet one inch; weight 190; running guard and a wonder; nothing like him in the East; fast down the field; deadly tackler; a treat to watch in action; Baironus fought three years to make the varsity; from the shoe city of Brockton; 186 pounds; sixone; as tough to stop as his name is to pronounce.

CENTER

Eddie Bergin, Somerville high, smallest regular on squad; boys like the mascot; lack of weight and height apparently no handicap, all scholastic center for Charlie Dickerman; a born fighter; absolutely fearless; pet stunt, diving thro' and grabbing legs; a risky style but he has been immune from injury; played three years with scrubs; stepped into breach when Mike Farrell joined hospital squad; tends only 53 weigh; 190 ready for action, a great little man.

QUARTERBACK

Capt. Phil O'Connell; the pride of Brockton; rated as passer par excellence; is a ball carrying fool; sneaky, fast and powerful, a glutton for punishment; great field general; the Crusaders' ace; already chosen to represent East in the East-West tilt; hit his 1931 peak against Brown; new Harvard ragged last fall; also passed 'em dizzy; small but tough; 153 pounds; 100 per cent courageous; as Capt Phil goes, so goes the Crusaders; a great broken field runner; a passer, who packs a barrel of deception.

HALF BACKS

Tony Rovinski and Marty Murray; Tony was uncovered by Coach O'Donnell; found down in Kingston, Pa.; went to St. John's Prep; starred for the Danvers boys for a couple of seasons; converted from a quarterback, due to scarcity of halfbacks and wonderful ability as ball carrier; gave Dartmouth more trouble than any Crusader; watch him cut back on runs to the right; throws every ounce of his 180 pounds into every rush; a bullet passer; also a fine kicker; too valuable to hold down a bench; Marty Murray came from Springfield, one of the few gridsters from the City of Homes to gain fame; light but fast; clever blocker; would be a standout but for O'Connell and Rovinski.

FULLBACK

Les Griffin; Everett but, eligible to hold from freshmen through lines of Denny Gildea and Dan Sullivan, the Dean Academy mentor; a senior; serving his third term as a regular; but making his debut as a fullback; outstanding blocking back; packs 172 pounds; just short of six feet; knows his football from A to Zed; bruising tackler; keen defender against passes.

The Jacobs, manager of the world's heavyweight champion, has laid the groundwork for the liveliest boxing war of recent years when he pulled into New York Harbor on the S. S. Ile De France.

Back from a three-months' stay with Schmeling in Germany, Jacobs visibly indicated that the old feud with James J. Johnston is far from over. It has been enlarged to include the Garden, now that Johnston has become associated with that organization.

Brandishing a three-page opinion from White & Stillman, his attorneys, Jacobs declared that Schmeling would not defend his title in any match less than 15 rounds. The California law permits 12-round no-decision matches, and Jacobs is willing to consider Walker over this route, he added.

That is, if I can get a guarantee for Schmeling's services. I am ringing Max to New York the first week in December, and Billy McCarney has outlined an exhibition tour that will land us at Los Angeles early in January. We will decide the Walker match then. If it takes place I have been offered $50,000 to have Max train at Azua (Alientu and we will accept that."

Jacobs said he has arranged to talk to Jack Dempsey over the long-distance telephone tomorrow night. He said he is convinced that Dempsey intends to fight.

"That looks like the big match of the summer to me," said Jacobs. "If Dempsey says yes, I am willing to make the match for the new Milk Fund some time in June."

Garden's Contract Dead, Says Jacobs

"Schmeling's contract was for a specific fight with Primo Carnera," said Jacobs. "We were forced to call it off because of a physical disability suffered by Schmeling in his match with Young Stribling.

"Our attorneys advise us that the contract expired on September 30, and I am taking their word for it."

Five minutes after Jacobs' intentions became public, Johnston served notice that the Garden will go to court to uphold its right in Schmeling. He said the Garden would enjoin Schmeling from boxing, and would sue any promoter that attempted to stage a Schmeling match.

"That's a ridiculous statement

tion of New York, and all contracts I had with the Garden were with its Illinois subsidiary. My fighter isn't recognized in this state, and Johnston is supposed to be suspended if he even talks to us."

Max to Insist on 15-Round Fight

Jacobs said he will not consider a 10-round match with Mickey Walker at Los Angeles. He said Schmeling will not defend his title in any match less than 15 rounds. The California law permits 12-round no-decision matches, and Jacobs is willing to consider Walker over this route, he added.

That is, if I can get a guarantee for Schmeling's services. I am ringing Max to New York the first week in December, and Billy McCarney has outlined an exhibition tour that will land us at Los Angeles early in January. We will decide the Walker match then. If it takes place I have been offered $50,000 to have Max train at Azua (Alientu and we will accept that."

Jacobs said he has arranged to talk to Jack Dempsey over the long-distance telephone tomorrow night. He said he is convinced that Dempsey intends to fight.

"That looks like the big match of the summer to me," said Jacobs. "If Dempsey says yes, I am willing to make the match for the new Milk Fund some time in June."

TUFTS LEADER REJOINS TEAM

Capt. Vic Knapman of Tufts, who has been out of competition for two weeks will start at center for the Tufts varsity against Bowdoin tomorrow.

GLEASON SOLE SUB TO FACE HOLY CROSS

Despite reports that Eddie Casey would use the shock troops against Holy Cross in the Stadium tomorrow, Harvard's first stringers will start the game, it was learned when Casey picked his starting eleven today.

With the exception of Frank Gleason for Bernie White at fullback, the regular Crimson first flight roster is intact for the game. Capt. Barry Wood, Jack Cricard, Johnny Schreschewsky and Gleason compose the Harvard backfield quartet.

Harvard was a 25-7 favorite in the betting today, though Coach Casey's own opinion is that Harvard and Holy Cross are evenly matched. Harvard's reserve strength, counting two complete reserve elevens, should be the deciding factor in giving Harvard a slight edge at game's time.

Nazro and Hagerman on Wings for Harvard

Tom Nazro and Carl Hagerman, Harvard's best wing pair, will go against Jim Cavalieri and Tony Colucci of Holy Cross. Ted Hardy and Dave Kopans will fill the Crimson tackle berths, while George Dinman and Henry Myerson get the guard assignments. With Hallowell over 200 pounds, Harvard's forward line will be at full strength.

Harvard has an edge over Holy Cross when the Crimson forward wall is matched with Mr. McEwan's linemen. Except for Colucci and Cavalieri, the star wingmen, Holy Cross has a shock forward wall starting the title.

Ryan, Reiss New Crusader Tackles

Jimmy Ryan and Charlie Reiss, starting tackles for Holy Cross, were subs until recently. The center section of the Holy Cross line, with Zyntell, Bergin and Baironnus constitutes a big barrier for Harvard's line plunges.

While Capt. Phil O'Connell will drive the Holy Cross eleven for much of the tilt, the eyes of the stadium will be upon his running mate, Tony Rovinski. Rovinski is listed as one of the coming greats of the Holy Cross backfield. Rotelli, Rovinski's ball carrying ability will be compared with Jack Cricard's.

With all but a few hundred of the 59,000 tickets sold, the Harvard officials were looking at the weather reports today. Barring a rainstorm tonight, the Harvard ticket dispensers expected to hang out the "sold out" sign hours before game time tomorrow morning.

LoCasio Defeats Gusti in Cue Match

Carl LoCasio of the Faneuil Billiard room downed J. Gusti of the same room, 30 to 12, at the 20th Century Billiard room, in a match of the young robin of the state title, three cushion billiards tournament. The winner of the 20th Century room meets A. Leetch of Stanley's recreation tonight at the 20th Century in another contest of the title play.

Exeter Squad at Peak for Andover

Exeter, N. H., Nov. 13—Exeter's eleven was held to a light drill in the cage in preparation for the Andover game tomorrow. The players are in the best of condition and no chances of injury were taken.

TERRIERS LOSE BACK FOR MANHATTAN FRAY

ULMAN OUT OF GRID CLASH TOMORROW

An unexpected blow which came from the team doctor ruling that Johnny Ulman will not be able to play tomorrow for the Boston University eleven hurt the Terriers' chances against Manhattan at Nickerson Field tomorrow afternoon.

Ulman has not been in uniform all week but it was expected that he would be all right by tomorrow. Johnny received a charley horse in the Tufts game.

Ulman has been holding down the fullback berth for the Terriers all year although he is only a sophomore. Johnny made the team his first day out for practice and nobody has been able to supplant him since. He is a good blocking and defensive back.

Palombo to Call Terrier Signals

With Ulman out Coach Mahaney has been forced to make a last-minute backfield shift. Phil Hoffstein, will be moved to a halfback, Ceri Clem will start at fullback and Al Palombo, who has not started a game in two years, will be in the play calling the signals.

Palomb was a regular three years ago and played a heady game of football, but has been used very little since. He is a smart signal caller and a good blocking back.

Coach Johnny Law and his Manhattan squad arrive in Boston this afternoon and will go directly to Nickerson Field and work out at 4 o'clock.

Manhattan Squad Dines With Terriers

The visitors will dine with the Terriers tonight and sleep at the clubhouse with the local gridders.

From New York reports it was learned that Manhattan will be without the services of two of its regulars.

Capt. Johnny De Negro, the visitors' brilliant quarterback is out of the starting lineup, but there is a slight chance he may be able to play part of the game. The other member out is Eddie LaFrance, a sophomore guard.

Manhattan's better condition and more favorable record are the two factors which will make the New York eleven the favorite.

Punts and Passes

By the Associated Press.

West Point, N. Y.—Army's final practice for the Pittsburgh game was very much a limited affair in order to save until Saturday's Saturday afternoon and at 6:15 the squad boarded the train for Pittsburgh.

New Haven, Ct.—Yale's players have a chance this week-end to work a game instead of playing in one. It is the first early November Saturday in several years that the Eli's have had an open day in their schedule.

New York—The Murphys apparently have it for the Fordham New York University game Saturday. The Rams present three members of the family, Capt. Jimmy, Connie and Phil, while Dick Murphy plays for N. Y. U.

Hanover, N. H.—Dartmouth ought to be well-rounded in the type of plays to use inside the 20-yard line Saturday. Rain yesterday made the practice field so soggy that only a 20-yard strip at one end could be used.

South Bend, Ind.—Notre Dame's players have had a busy week before the Navy game. Mid-semester examinations began Monday and the squad had to sandwich its brief drills in between exams.

Princeton, N. J.—Another new backfield is listed as the probable starter for Princeton against Washington and Lee Saturday. The latest combination consists of Craig at quarter, McPartland and Sepfarth at halves and Zundel at fullback.

New York—With Bob McNamara, one of the East's outstanding kickers, probably out of the Fordham game, Chick Meehan, New York University coach has had a busy time looking for a good substitute. John Tanguay and Jack McDonald have come the closest to imitating McNamara's great boots.

Philadelphia—Paul Riblett, Pennsylvania captain, does not want to miss a game if he can help it. Kept on the sidelines by a knee injury yesterday, Riblett spent most of the afternoon trying to convince the coaches that he ought to be allowed to play against Georgia Tech Saturday. But Mel Hemon held his place and is expected to face the Southerners.

Notre Dame-Navy Grid Game on Air

New York, Nov. 13 (INS)—Three big football games will be aired tomorrow, the broadcasts are:

1:30 p. m.—Pitt vs. Army over Columbia.

2:45 p. m.—Notre Dame vs. Navy over NBC.

2:45 p. m.—Georgia vs. Tulane over NBC.

LES CANADIENS LOSE OPENER

Montreal, Nov. 13 (INS)—The world champions, Les Canadiens of Montreal, today were off to a bad start in their 1931-32 campaign. They fell before the New York Rangers here last night by the score of 4 to 1 in the opening game of the National Hockey League season.

A record total of 35 penalties marked the evening's play, but the Rangers outplayed the champions, in a last minute effort to tie up the game, Manager Cecil Hart threw five Canadiens forwards onto the ice.

There was no scoring in the first period, but Keeling, Dillon and W. Cook tallied for the New Yorkers in the second, and Dillon scored again for the Rangers in the third period. Gallis tallied for the Canadiens in the final period.

Blackhawks Much Improved Team

Toronto, Nov. 13 (INS)—The Chicago Blackhawks may do big things in hockey this season. They looked a much-improved outfit here last night in defeating the Maple Leafs 2 to 1 in the season's second game.

A crowd of 13,500 saw the contest, March and Ripley were the Chicago scorers, while Conacher tallied for the Leafs.

N. Y. Americans Win Easily Over Falcons

Detroit, Nov. 13 (INS)—First honors in the National Hockey League schedule rested on the New York Americans today. The Star-Spangled Banner boys piled up three goals in the last five minutes of play here last night and turned back the Detroit Falcons 3 to 2.

Himes, Emms and Mascar scored as the Falcons tired and the two final tallies were made by the Detroit team, paced with one man short.

Eli Freshman Crews Win All Three Races

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 13 (INS)—Freshmen crews won all three class races held on New Haven Harbor yesterday afternoon, closing the fall racing program on the harbor. The first freshmen heavyweight eight defeated sophomore and junior crews over the Henley distance by three-quarters of a length in the principal race. The finishes were close. No time was taken.

SUN BEAU LEADS WITH $376,744

New York, Nov. 13 (INS)—Sun Beau, world's leading money-winning thoroughbred won only $1000 racing as a two-year-old in 1927. He now is the world leader with $376,744.

Top Flight, C. V. Whitney's two-year-old filly, champion of this season, won $218,000 in less than five months and is qualified to go on and trim the big horse.

Sun Beau has been unplaced three times in 21 of four starts. Top Flight was unbeaten in seven starts. Sun Beau raced his fourth season before he could pass the mark set by Top Flight in a single year.

When Trainer Tom Healey completes the job of unwinding Top Flight at Pimlico, he will set away at Brookdale Farm an 8th-of-a-pound horse. She has proved capable of running out two over any route. The going makes no difference.

She is a superlative middler a long-distance or sprinter, please performer that excels in combat. She stands up over the better grade of colts as she does over horses of her own sex. She handles weight like a Roseben jumper in front and can be tucked or placed to come from behind.

scored on only once. The only mutual opponent was Vanderbilt, which Georgia defeated 9-0 and Tulane defeated 19-0. Tulane won the game a year ago by a score of 25-0, but no such one-sided game is anticipated this year. It is any team's game with Tulane possibly having a slight edge.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt are other southern teams which meet in an important game. Tennessee also is undefeated and has scored 203 points to a safety by its opponents. Vanderbilt has played an exceptionally hard season and has one of its best teams. Tennessee is the choice here.

In the middle West, western conference teams have important battles. Chicago and Illinois, neither of which have had success this year, meet in their traditional game, with each having a chance. Purdue should defeat Iowa and Ohio State apparently carries too much for Wisconsin. The Michigan and Michigan State teams played a scoreless tie a year ago, and another close game is expected. On the Coast Stanford plays Nevada, Southern California plays Montana and California plays Idaho. The Big Three of the Coast look for victories.

SHAWKEY MAY BOSS BEARS

New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—The "hot stove league" already has nominated a new manager for the Newark Club of the International League.

With announcement of the purchase by the New York Yankees of the Newark franchise and all that goes with it, veteran baseball men believe that some Yankee "grandmaster" would be named to succeed Al Mamaux as pilot of the club, and picked upon Bob Shawkey as the most logical nominee.

Shawkey, now is reserved by the Jersey City Club, which he managed in the latter stages of the 1931 season, but it was believed there would be no real obstacles to overcome should the Yankees desire his services as manager at Newark.

Most baseball writers believed that Mamaux, who made an excellent showing with the Newark Club last season, finishing a close second to Rochester, would be retained in a coaching capacity.

Coincident with the announcement of the Yankees' purchase of the Newark franchise, officials of the Albany Eastern League Club a class B outfit, announced the Yankees had offered $100,000 for the Albany franchise and stadium. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, denied this and said his organization was "not interested in the Albany club and has made no offer for it."

Huskies Compete in Turkey Shoot

George R. Fennell, Northeastern University rifle team coach, announced that the rifle club will sponsor a turkey shoot on its own range Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 24. All students in the day division of the university are eligible.

NEW CAPTAIN FOR BRUINS

Montreal, Nov. 13—Fred Hitchman, captain of the Boston Bruins wants to be relieved of his title. The Boston hockey team worked out at the Montreal forum here for the opening game with the Ma[illegible] rooms tomorrow.

Under new rules, managers are prohibited from talking to the referees during the game. This puts more work on the captain, and Hitchman said that this was too much.

The veterans meet before practice this morning and elect a captain. Goal Tender Tiny Thompson, who is on the ice all the time and Eddie Shore are the leading eligibles.

Out-of-Town Boys in St. Joe's Bouts

An avalanche of entries from out of town boys and several from out of state have been received for the weekly St. Joseph's T. A. S. amateur boxing tournament, to be conducted by "Father Bill" Cuddy, Saturday night, at Mechanics Building. Classes will include 112, 128, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and light heavyweights, and the latter two divisions will be featured.

From Leominster, a full team of boxers has entered, including a boy in each class.

Only a few more weekly shows remain for the "purses" before Cuddy starts his annual Golden Glove series, the amateur boxing classic of the winter. The boys are all anxious to be in the best of shape for the Golden Glove bouts and are taking part in every tournament that they possibly can. That accounts for the fast action that has been seen at every St. Joe show in Mechanics this season.

COLGATE TEAM IS CHOICE

Syracuse, Nov. 13—The Colgate University football team will hold a slight advantage over the undefeated Syracuse eleven when the teams meet here tomorrow in the 33d clash since 1891.

The Maroon is given the edge because of the performances of the respective teams against Penn State.

Colgate had little difficulty in trouncing Penn State 32-6 while Vic Hanson's Orangemen were pushed to the limit to escape with a 7-0 victory over the Nittany Lions.

Syracuse's starting eleven has not been changed since the spring but been changed since the spring practice sessions. It has remained intact in seven consecutive victories and has proven particularly adept when the Orange was trailing. In the Michigan State game at East Lansing, Syracuse trailed twice but hammered its way to a 15-0 victory.

There will be five seniors representing the Orange for the last time on the home field. They include Capt. George Eckert and Abe Stoneberg, ends; Lew Newton, tackle; Art Cramer, quarterback; and Henry Frank, fullback.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

Matchmaker Billy Ames' $100,000 offer for Jack Dempsey to meet Ernie Schaaf in Boston next year caused a tremendous explosion in local boxing circles. It proved that the Garden matchmaker intends to go after the biggest possible fistic plums.

If successful in getting Dempsey to meet Schaaf, Ames intends to match the old Tiger with Jack Sharkey if he disposes of the latter's stablemate.

Mr. Boston

"Where does Ames get off trying to match Schaaf and Dempsey at this early date?" demanded Dorval. "After I get through with Schaaf next Thursday night he won't be any good for any promoter, especially for a big shot with Dempsey."

By his offer to Dempsey, Ames has put Schaaf right on the spot. Ernie must now win from Dorval in a decisive manner to maintain his present lofty ring standing.

"How do you think you would go with the old tiger?" I asked.

"I would knock him out," replied Schaaf, simply. "I'll admit that Dempsey can probably hit as hard right now as he could at any time during his career, but his legs are not as good as they used to be. Remember how he stopped dead in his tracks when he tried to catch up with Tunney following the long count at Chicago.

"For the present, I'm giving my attention to Dorval. I want to knock him out.

"When I was in the hospital with blood poisoning, Dan Carroll chased a boxing commission doctor out to check up on me. Carroll claimed I was running out on a contract to meet Dorval. Later Dan put on his old police badge, went to the office of the boxing commission and asked the whistle on me.

"The only reason I delayed my meeting with Dorval was because I was not physically fit to go through with the bout on the original date. I was lucky the poisoning in my arm was checked in time. I had the same kind of trouble that caused the death of Stanley Stasiak. Yet Carroll annoyed me while I was in the hospital and then blew the whistle.

"In the navy we used to say, 'Once a cop, always a cop!' I guess his gang for Carroll, too.

"I understand that when Carroll was a cop he used to lug many a drunk to the box. This practice made him strong. He used his strength to good advantage carrying Maloney to his corner on many an occasion. He will have to lug Dorval to his corner after I get through with him next Thursday night. I'm going to knock Dorval as cold as some of those mackerels Maloney used to sell when he worked at the Fish Pier."

Callahan vs. Fuller

I believe Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. has used good judgment in matching Sammy Fuller and Andy Callahan, local rivals, for a ten-round bout at the Arena on Monday night. Each of the previous times bouts between these boys were filled with action.

I find that when high class local boys are pitted against each other that the fans get a run for their money. The rivalry between the two men caused them to step on high.

Fuller and Callahan are aggressive and can punch. There should be few idle moments once Callahan and Fuller start letting their punches breeze.

EAGLE FROSH BATTLE H. C. AT HEIGHTS

The college frosh football season reaches its peak this afternoon when the Boston College freshmen and the Holy Cross freshmen meet in their annual grid classic at Alumni Field, University Heights. The Purple will be a general favorite to win the decision.

The Purple-Eaglet game was originally scheduled to take place between the halves of the B. C. Centre bout at Fenway last Wednesday but was shifted forward in order to make room for the Armistice Day services.

The Holy Cross eleven is one of the strongest in undergraduate ranks, having scored brilliant victories over Dean Academy and St. Anselm's while dropping a single hard-fought contest to the St. John's prep eleven by six points.

On the other hand, it was not until last Friday that the Eaglets were able to score their first win of the season when they dropped Vermont Academy in a close game at the Heights.

The Holy Cross lineup will include a host of Greater Boston schoolboys. Three members a former Boston College high school eleven held first string berths. Clem McCann, All-scholastic end for two years, is playing right end.

Next to him is Buzz Harvey and Jim Moran in the tackle berths. Lea Avery Hyde Park, is on the other wing. Tom Kelley of Brookline's high is at left guard and Tony Morandes of Brockton is the choice for center.

The Eaglets will present a lighter and less experienced frontier but from the improvement shown in the past week should put up a good battle.

OKLAHOMAN PINS COUNT AT ARENA

By RINGSIDE

Harry Strack, powerful heavyweight wrestler from Oklahoma, won the right to meet Gus Sonnenberg at the Arena on Thanksgiving night when he defeated the colorful Count Zarynoff with a flying tackle in 48m. 30s.

It was a fall match, and went on before the Ed George-Charley Leahman contest. George won from Leahman in two out of three falls.

The first loss went to Leahman in the fast time of 3m. 15s. He pinned George with a leg scissors and wrist lock.

George gained the second fall with a flying head scissors in 13m. 40s, and the third and deciding fall in 8m. 35s., with a inside crotch hold.

A toss of a coin by Referee Charley Donnell sent Strack and Zarynoff into the ring in the first part of the double wind-up. It was also agreed that the tussle should be decided by one fall.

Paul Bowser kept his promise to give Strack a referee other than Charley O'Donnell. The assignment fell to Leon Burbank, one of the most able wrestling referees in the country.

Zarynoff sent a terrific pace for Strack. At times he dazzled the westerner by his trick holds. The Count also roughed things up with Strack. On one occasion he deliberately butted Strack.

Zarynoff made a mistake trying to match strength with Strack. The latter is one of the strongest men in the mat game. He gradually wore the Count down.

During a mixup he landed on Zarynoff's stomach. He knocked the wind out of the Count and almost pinned him. When Zarynoff got up Strack followed up his advantages and cut loose with a flying tackle. He pinned the Count in 48m. 30s.

George Comes Back After Poor Start

Ed George was obliged to stage a sparkling comeback to win from Charley Leahman. The latter surprised George and everybody else when he scored with the first fall in 3m. 15s. George was just settling down for a hard bout when he was pinned with a leg scissors and wrist lock.

George was a mighty determined young man when he resumed wrestling. He forced the issue, and didn't give his opponent a chance to get out front. Ed gave the crowd a thrill when he leaped in the air, clamped on a head scissors and brought Leahman to the mat in 13m. 40s.

George had all the best of things when wrestling was resumed. After 8m. 35s. of battling, he clamped on an inside crotch hold and slammed Leahman to defeat.

Sherry Wins Bout From Ivan Vakuroff

Jack Sherry, now under the management of Dick Curley of Chicago, continued his campaign to prove he is the best wrestler in the world when he disposed of Ivan Vakuroff in 15 minutes, 20 seconds, with an airplane whirl and slam.

TROJANS SIGN EX-N. H. GUARD

Frank Clapp, captain and guard of New Hampshire State team last year, has been signed by the Quincy Trojans for Sunday afternoon, at Dilboy Field, against the Fitton A. C. eleven.

The Trojans have scored 167 points to their opponents 25 so far this season. The Fittons have not been a high scoring team so far, and their chances are slim of running up a big score against the Trojans this Sunday and the Pere Marquettes a week from Sunday.

Fait Elkins, who has been suffering from a leg injury the past two weeks, is again in shape and will start Sunday for the Fittons. This Indian has been sorely missed.

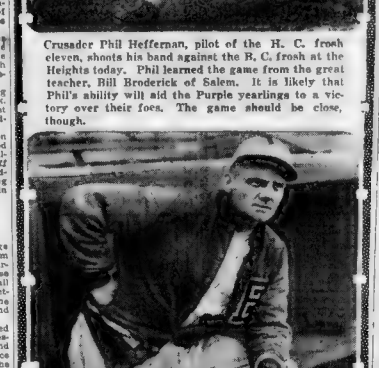
Crusader Phil Heffernan, pilot of the H. C. frosh eleven, shoots his hand against the R. C. frosh at the Heights today. Phil learned the game from the great teacher, Bill Broderick of Salem. It is likely that Phil's ability will aid the Purple yearlings to a victory over their foes. The game should be close, though.



Max Carey, new pilot of the Brooklyn Dodgers, gave the N. Y. fans a jolt when he stated he'd give nothing more than the waiver price for the services of Hack Wilson. It had been said that Hack would go to the Dodgers next season. Well, Hack is sure he won't be waived out of the league, at any rate.

The Daily Dozen

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Ernie Schaaf stopped training long enough to laugh at the photo. "Heh! heh!" heh-hed Ernie. "He thinks he's Napoleon What's he reaching inside his shirt for? An alibi?"

Quicker than you can violate the Eighteen Amendment, the report of Schaaf's unseemly merriment over the photo was carried to Dorval's camp, Your reporter, standing by, inhaled the following Napoleonic comment.

"I see by the papers," said Dorval as he knocked a sparring partner ten years nearer the payment on his life insurance, "that Jack Sharkey calls Schaaf a million dollar baby. Heh! heh! heh!

"Schaaf may be a million dollar baby to Sharkey, but when I get through with him, you can buy him in the ten cent store."

"I'll hit Schaaf so hard that the Navy will have to award him wound stripes."

"I plan to give Schaaf the honor of becoming the 'unknown sailor.'

"I might remind Schaaf that it took a half dozen good men to lick Napoleon, after whom I am named.

"But Schaaf will be in there all alone with me next Thursday And it won't be any Waterloo

"Am I afraid of Sharkey being in Schaaf's corner? Who do I look like? Tilly?"

Dorval was still talking at press time. We'll tune in on him again later.

22 Games for Eli Basketball Team

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 13—Yale basketball team will play 22 games this winter. The program includes a Christmas vacation trip This year the Elis will travel through New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania in playing five games, the opponents to be the University of Buffalo, Western Reserve, Toledo University, Ohio State and Carnegie Tech.

The list of games includes the two-game series with the members of the Eastern Intercollegiate League.

BROWN READY FOR LIONS' INVASION

Providence, Nov. 13—Brown's first major home gridiron clash of the season against the ferocious Columbia Lions tomorrow is expected to draw a capacity throng to the Brown Stadium.

Lou Little's second Blue and White production is led by Ralph Hewett, prominently mentioned as an All-America backfield selection. Columbia is headed for Providence today, determined to score its first victory in history over the Bruins. The squad from Morningside Heights is scheduled to work out in the Brown Stadium this afternoon.

Andy Rotelli, veteran Brown fullback, and Hal Ball, substitute sophomore end, injured while making his second touchdown run against Ohio Wesleyan last week, will be out of action.

The sophomore quarterback, Joe Buonanno, had a recurrence of an old injury that may keep him from waltzing around the Columbia ends. All the other Bears are expected to be ready, although Bill Gibane's condition is not what it should be. Columbia also reports that three regulars, Ed Edling, end; Joe Linehan, halfback, and Otto Schwarz, fullback, will be out, and that their places will be taken, respectively, by Van Voorhees, Monroe and Mudgett.

Jack Fernbee, veteran tackle, was not a starter against Ohio Wesleyan, but he is expected to win back his post from Roland Brown for the conflict. Captain Paul Maddock, one of Brown's great linemen, will play at the other tackle post. Letolle and Walker are the guards.

The Brown backfield will very likely be the same as it was last weekend, with the veteran Dan Marsan, at quarter; Ed Gilmartin and Penn Harrerve, halfbacks and Bob Chase, fullback.

Girls' Title Field Hockey Matches on

The deciding games for the championship of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Girls' Field Hockey League are played this afternoon.

The Melrose high girls' eleven has only to win from Winchester high tomorrow at Melrose to cop the crown. If Melrose is beaten the Arlington, Concord, Stoneham and Wellesley high girls would have a chance at the crown.

Harvard Anger Aroused by Husing

By W. F. T.

This Harvard-Husing controversy cropping up and crashing through the news, once more raises the question: "What is an Announcer's Mission?"

Sufficient evidence appears to be on hand indicating that Ted Husing of the Columbia Broadcasting System staff displayed a measure of prejudice while reporting Harvard's victory over Dartmouth last Saturday.

BAD LANGUAGE

Using the word "nuts" is unpardonable. Saw wit, sees, and to describe actions of an athlete as emanating wholly from the cerebral cortex is the use of exceptionally poor judgment. What's more it was in the case of one of Mr. Husing's pet peeves that he was so sharp.

In general, it's a good report that line of comment as from the announcer sponsored last Saturday. Wood's touch, passing on the day in question was exceptionally fine. Reference thereto is the microphone man accordingly becomes not only a seer but was an untruth It was of Wood that Husing said:

THUMBS DOWN

Regardless of what his superiors may do about it, Husing's mouth will never grant the loquacious announcer admission to the other grandstand seats in the Stadium across the Charles. William Paley, head of CBS, will find a letter on his desk in the morning, as written by William Bingham, in charge of all football broadcasts for the famous Universal Chain.

WAY OPEN FOR ALL TO AID JOBLESS

Ever been cold? Really cold?
Ever been hungry? So it hurts?
Or broke, with hungry children at home?

If you haven't, it would repay you to visit the Municipal Employment Bureau and see the crowd there looking for jobs

NOT CHARITY BUT HELP

The Boston Evening American feels sure that if you made such a visit, you would promptly be moved to help by supplying some odd job for at least one man or woman, for a few hours, or a few days, at the cost of a few dollars.

Not charity, mind you, but assistance of practical value to yourself as well as to them. And to their families, too.

It's a long walk home from the employment bureau for those who fail to get jobs. A long walk when the heart is heavy. And the stomach empty. And loved ones at home waiting to hear the bad news, day after day.

PLENTY OF CHANCE

Conditions are improving throughout the business and industrial world, but help is needed this winter, and that is why the Boston Evening American, mindful of the aid you gave last year, is again appealing to you, in co-operation with the Municipal Employment Bureau.

Have your windows been washed for the Thanksgiving visitor?

Have your storm doors and windows been put on yet?

Have you got some wood you want sawed for the fireplace?

How about whitewashing the ceilings? Polishing the furniture? Beating the rugs? Cleaning up the dead leaves? Cleaning up the cellar? Repairing the steps, the garage door that is so hard to open or the house door that squeaks and won't shut tight?

Skilled workmen and women await your call. The number is Liberty 8607. The address 25 Church st., Boston

EMPLOYE GAIN RECORDED BY U. S. STEEL

Spread work . . . or human suffering will spread, is the real message behind the movement for a six-hour working day, advocated by William Randolph Hearst.

Thousands of employers who do not want to be responsible for the spread of unemployment and its accompanying misery are now examining the possibilities of reducing working hours and giving jobs to more men.

This is the ninth of a series of studies of the six-hour working day and kindred plans for spreading work.

By LAURA VITRAY

"We are confident that when the final chapter of this depression is written the United States Steel Corporation's record in providing work will be one of its outstanding achievements."

Does such a statement seem to have a boastful hint?

Then think what it means that this mammoth concern, which at the peak of the 1929 business boom employed 225,000 men, has not only not turned them loose upon public charity and the community, but is actually giving work today to 227,000.

"Out of the experience of this time will flow much that is good by way of example and experience and remedy," Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the steel corporation's finance committee adds.

MUST SPREAD WORK

"Until we resume a normal basis of operation, it should be the first duty of every individual concerned with the employment of others to see, during this dull period, that the work—whether it is 60 or 70 or 80 or 1200 per cent of capacity—is divided equitably among those who are able and willing to work."

A quarter of a million families is perhaps the largest number that any single industrial unit has ever successfully tided over a period of hard times. In meeting the steady decline in business the U. S. Steel Company's officers, warned by their experts of the impending storm shortly before it broke, got off to an early start in seeking a way out.

"In 1929," says Mr. Taylor, "when serious declines occurred in the values of the securities of the country, it appeared to us that these were the forerunners of readjustments of commodity values.

"As a possible consequence of such unsettlement, evidencing overproduction, we foresaw that the operation of our plants, like others similarly situated, might be interfered with, and that, unless provision were made against it, unemployment would inevitably follow.

"Plans were promptly made, and a really simple expedient employed . . . that, if operations should be lessened, the remaining work would be distributed equitably among all the workers."

PIONEER IN FIELD

The U. S. Steel was thus among the first in America to inaugurate a system of "spreading work," which, as the principle has been applied to many industries, has in a large number resulted in the adoption of a six-hour working day.

The steel corporation's method however, has not been that of the six-hour shift, although it involves reduction of working time.

Instead, the method is one of rotational shifts, or rotation of gangs, each gang working to fill a particular order of a shipment of steel.

If on Monday morning 40,000 men are needed for the execution of a particular job, the payroll department selects from the company's list those 40,000 men whose record shows the least earnings in the last two-week period. And they are called to make up the gang which will operate on that job

NAMES ARE POOLED

Each day and every time orders are received such selection of gangs is made. The jobs, of course are of different duration, some for one or two days, some for much longer periods

But as soon as a job is completed the men's names go back into the general pool from which the selections for new work are made, with preference always to those who recently have earned the least.

Tomorrow we will look at the suggestion of a six-hour working day as it affects the railroads.

Tickets Going Fast for Midnight Shows

An advance sell-out is indicated for the midnight performances to be held by the National Motion Picture Industries at 66 Boston theaters on Friday, November 20, in aid of Boston's unemployed

Business houses, clubs, church societies and others have already disposed of large blocks of tickets The gross receipts are to be turned over to Mayor Curley's welfare relief fund.

THE PASS-PORT TO SUCCESS

WHEN a man is well dressed he always has a running start over his less thoughtful rival. Whether it be in the business or social world a man's clothes go a big way toward stamping him as a success or otherwise. When an employer selects a man for promotion its dollars to doughnuts the best dressed man is favored—all things being equal. It's the weather vane of public opinion—it's the one real thing to do . . today more than ever . . Dress up!

America's finest All Wool FLEECE OVERCOATS $22.50

HOWARD Clothes makes it easy for every man, no matter what his station in life may be, to be well dressed at all times. Hundreds and hundreds of men who have previously been in the habit of paying $50 and $60 for their clothes have changed to Howard Clothes. These men have discovered that Howard Clothes give them everything . . Right style . . Fine all wool fabrics . . Pleasing and uncommon patterns . . Perfect fit . . and clothes that retain their shape after months and months of wear.

We bring about this advantageous condition by making every Howard garment in the giant Howard factories . . by employing the most skilled union journeymen tailors and by selling direct to the wearer through our own economically operated stores.

We ask you to come to Howard . . to see the clothes, to check the facts for yourself, for only in that way can you really see what we have done for every thinking thrifty man. You'll discover "It doesn't cost much to dress well."

Here's a coffee to satisfy the most exacting taste

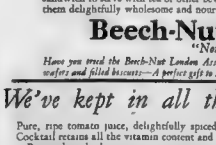
Coffees grown in the clear, dry air and radiant sunshine of upland plantations are far better in flavor and quality than coffees grown on the hot, moist, tropic lowlands.

By far the greater part of the coffees used in the Beech-Nut blend are the carefully selected beans of these rarer mountain-grown varieties.

That is why Beech-Nut Coffee is so much richer in flavor—so mellow in blend—of such fragrant aroma—a coffee to delight and satisfy the most exacting taste. None of the rare flavor and freshness of Beech-Nut Coffee is lost in the packing. It is protected by the most modern type, high-vacuum tin.

Beech-Nut Coffee

"Rare Flavor from Tropic Heights"



The Crillon, in New York City

The Crillon is one of the exclusive eating places which has chosen Beech-Nut as the bacon most sure to please its exacting clientele. The name BEECH-NUT on the menu is a promise of quality and supreme flavor in foods.

When that morning appetite calls

There is delightful anticipation in answering the call of a morning appetite, when one wakes with the aroma of the finest American bacon—Beech-Nut Bacon—stealing into their nostrils. Thin, delicious strips of uniform size—evenly proportioned with fat and lean—it's the tenderest, most flavorsome bacon that ever crisped under a fork. That's why its reputation has spread to the far corners of the earth. Not only a delicious breakfast meat —there's hardly a meal that couldn't be made more tasty and appetizing by the aroma and savoriness of a few slices of Beech-Nut Bacon—as a garnish for chops, steaks or sea foods.

"You Can't Mistake the Flavor"

A cream cracker for every service

Flakiness which means crispness—tender, yet firm enough to spread without crumbling—you'll find Beech-Nut Cream Crackers especially suitable for every use for which crackers are intended. Delicious for breakfast with marmalade for perfect cracker for serving with soups and salads—especially good with cheese or jelly at the end of a heavy meal—or as a light sandwich to serve with tea or other beverages. Of light, yet substantial texture, you will find them delightfully wholesome and nourishing.

"Nothing Like Them"

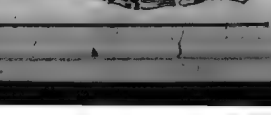
Have you tried the Beech-Nut Landau Assortment? An attractively boxed variety of dainty sandwich wafers and filled biscuits—A perfect gift to send as a holiday college treat or to tuck into a bon voyage box.

We've kept in all the VITAMINS

Pure, ripe tomato juice, delightfully spiced and seasoned, Beech-Nut Tomato Juice Cocktail retains all the vitamin content and full health value of fresh tomatoes

Prepared with the utmost care—it comes to you with all the delicious flavor and sparkling lightness of fresh, vine-ripened fruit.

Keep a few bottles on ice, ready to serve at any time—there's nothing like it to keep one "fit" morning, noon and night—full of energy and healthfulness.



Beech-Nut Tomato Juice Cocktail

Beech-Nut Pure Tomato Juice (unsweetened) for children—and as a base for soups or jellied salads. Serve Beech-Nut Catsup or Chili Sauce with meats, fish, oysters, eggs, fowl.

THE VOICE OF Broadway
By Louis Sobol

Situation Wanted!

Near the hut that houses Berlin (he of "Always" and "Remember") Just a block from Tin Pan Alley, where the rhymes that don't are written.
Any night, about eleven, you will see two urchins hooting
In that off-beat Charleston rhythm (who among us hasn't tried it?)
Two there are, as torn as volumes of a pornographic nature
That one finds in public bookstalls, covered with the dust of ages.
One has hair as red as sunrise, in, let's say, Manhattan Transfer,
Musty as a hotel Bible, dirty as the all-told story
Of the salesman and the model in the lobby of the Sinton.
"Weyburn,"
Is as flashy as Ray Bolger's and as fervid as Hal Le Roy's.
Joe collects the jits and pennies, while his partner does the "wow step."
Now they've asked this bard to tell you, if you're in the booking business,
That they're open for next season, and will work cheap for a showing.
If you're interested, write them, care of Nadick's, Forty-eighth street.

Geo. D. Lottman.

Broadwaywardness!

Now here's a sample of Broadway psychology that should interest you. It's the case of a secretary to one of our leading producers—an ambitious fellow, who year after year turned out plays, but never could sell them. So when he completed his last one, he decided to use a nom de plume. The piece hadn't been in the hands of the brokers more than three days before it was sold—to another leading producer. The fellow went into a rave over it. He showed it to everybody he met—and they all raved. He showed it to Groucho Marx and Groucho slapped one hand on one thigh and the other hand on the other thigh and exclaimed, "What a play! Just for me and the boys. A little music here—and a little music there—what a play!" Everybody, you can see, was happy about it—particularly the author who in the daytime worked for another producer. And then, just the other day, the chap who bought the play showed it to a fellow who knew the playwright and his assumed moniker. He laughed. "Well, are you sofi!" he giggled. "Do you know who this really is? It's Soandso, Suchandsuch's secretary. He's putting one over on you, using another name." The producer went white. The idea of producing a play written by a mere secretary appalled him. He had already ordered a score written for it—but he cancelled the order. He called up Groucho and told him about it. The more he thought how close he had come to producing a play written by a mere secretary, the more he shuddered. So the piece won't be produced—not by this fellow, at any rate—and the secretary who went to all the trouble to change his name, is wondering why his play, which the producer who bought it assured him would be the sensation of the season, should suddenly have lost all its value.

That's Life, Too!

At a party Sunday night, at the home of Leon Spachner, I noticed Jack Oakie, the screen comic, in a close huddle with Murray Queen. Oakie kept poking him in the ribs, chucking him under the chin, pinching his cheeks. Just a couple of great pals—and I was convinced of that when I heard Oakie chirp, "Yessir, Murray, I certainly got you to thank for everything. You certainly did me a good turn." It was later that I learned that this was the first time Oakie and Queen had met since the time some years ago when Queen fired Oakie right out of the chorus of "Peggy Ann" because he was too boisterous, assuring him at that time that as far as he was concerned Jack's career as a chorus boy was over for good. And so it proved to be.

So We'll Know!

Dear Mr. Sobol: I was sorry to read in your column Friday and to hear you quote over the air Sunday night the report that my son, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and his wife, Joan Crawford, are separating. I feel it is only fair to those interested in them to know that it is not true. They are, without exception, the most devoted couple I have ever known—their understanding, appreciation, faith and love for each other should be an inspiration to all married couples. They will soon be here and I hope you will accept my invitation to meet my son and my daughter-in-law to witness for yourself a truly happy couple.

Cordially, Beth Whiting.

By a Wall!

I hid the flower in a jar
Of jasper by the wall.
That urn is now stood cold and bare
Where once the rose grew tall.

Close down, I pressed the top and sealed
Its scent against the years
A jasper jar beside a wall
May hold a host of tears

A stranger stumbled in the darkness
Clinging to the wall—
A broken jar of paper bleeds.
Of roses that grew tall
—WILMA ETHEL CRITTENDEN

This Thing Called Love!

Now, love is a strange thing. I've never tried to understand it and I defy any one else to clearly define it or to explain what happens to us after love is dead. What I'm really trying to say in my muddled way is that for a long time, one of the really grand romances along Broadway was the flaming affair between Harry Richman and the beautiful, dark-eyed Virginia Biddle. The two were inseparable and the two were apparently happy. Then, for some reason the romance came to an end. Under ordinary circumstances, that would be all there was to say. One or the other of the two would be left disconsolate, and seek solace elsewhere. But the aftermath in this case is different. For now that love is gone, the beautiful Virginia has engaged a lawyer to bring suit against Richman—not for blighted affections—but for concrete damages for injuries sustained in that recent fire aboard Harry's yacht.

YOUTH GIVEN FLING IN NEW FILM

New Theme on Keith's Screen

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Wesley Ruggles, whom you will recall as the fellow who made "Cimarron," is apparently staking his all, or nearly all, on "Are These Our Children?" He has tried, so he announces, to permit youth to have the greatest fling it ever had cinematically. They call the picture a "saga of youth," and show rare courage by placing the historic burden in the hands of youngsters. Judging by past performances of Ruggles, we may look for snappy screen fare in this movie, on view at RKO Keith's today.

* * *

Ruggles who is a good deal of a research chap worked up the picture himself. He did it in pictures, instead of manufacturer Requenciennaires, by personal inquiry, he probed his problem of youth of today. He put in his spare time investigating, then set him down and wrote his story. Filled with the spirit of the drama he wanted to paint in lights and shadows, he got his cast together and began shooting. His ability as director will undoubtedly be seen in the output. It should have amusing atmosphere, vitality; indeed Ruggles would do it that way. As to the acting possibilities few southerners are many. For he figures the manners are bred in our exceedingly gifted Beryl Mercer and William Orlamond, for youth nice Linden, Jan Alexander, Morris Gale, Rochelle Hudson, Mary Boland and others a number 21 and one very well known to the movie public.

Eight Acts on Boston Bill

At the RKO Keith-Boston Manager Ray Conner has arranged for a big stage show of eight major RKO vaude acts, and in addition to the photoplay, "A Dangerous Affair," starring Jack Holt. Heading the stage bill is Peter Higgins, radio artist and talking picture player, who is making an Eastern tour of RKO theaters prior to beginning a long-term contract with Radio Pictures.

Other acts include the musical comedy team of Arthur and Morton Havel, who present their new act, "Hot Water," and who bring with them to Boston Helen Lockhart, Denise Dooley and Bud Williamson.

Curley Honors Al Somerby

Al Somerby, genial manager of the Old Howard and Bowdoin Square theaters, is today carrying a bibelash presented to him by Mayor James M. Curley, in recognition of Somerby's rounding out his 33d year as manager of the two houses. In addition, Mayor Curley also sent to Somerby a letter of congratulations and the hope that Somerby would serve 33 more years in the same position.

Chenkin Quick at Makeup

Victor Chenkin, Russian character singer, will be heard in Symphony Hall next Sunday evening. What amazes his audiences more than anything else is his mastery of makeup. If he appears in five changes of costume, he is five different persons. Each personality is shed with the garments that enfold it; new garments mean an inner as well as an outer transformation.

STEVENSON'S STORY TO BE BROUGHT TO SCREEN

Carl Laemmle, Jr., Plans All-Star Cast to Make 'The Suicide Club'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Nov. 12—Charlie Chaplin's long cherished dream to bring Robert Louis Stevenson's "Suicide Club" to the screen will not come to pass. The administrators of the Stevenson estate, tired of waiting for Charlie to make up his mind, have sold the rights to Carl Laemmle, Jr., who plans to make a production of this fascinating story on a big scale.

Louella O. Parsons

Junior is just back from Palm Springs where he went to recuperate. He isn't really well yet, but he tells me he is well enough to plan an all-star cast for "The Suicide Club."

"Strictly Dishonorable," with a superb cast, has taught young Laemmle that experienced actors are the best.

A lot of responsibility rests on the shoulders of Harry Cohn. Either he can make a good picture of "Final Edition" or a very bad one. If he caricatures the newspaper people I am going to be as much agin' him as I have been for him all these years. But Harry tells me he intends to make his picture as near right as is humanly possible.

A meeting of the utmost importance to the motion picture industry will be held here next week. Adolph Zukor is due here Friday. Harry Warner is already here and other film chiefs are due to arrive. The causes of the current depression in motion pictures will be discussed pro and con, with an effort made to determine the reason. Mr. Zukor remains at the head of Paramount, and S. R. Kent, according to someone on the inside, is in a better position than ever before. John Hertz, the Yellow taxi man who recently bought a huge block of stock, will be elected chairman of the finance committee at the next Paramount meeting.

Seen and Heard

The news of the indictment of Theodore Dreiser and Marie Pergain on a morals charge was received with more than passing interest in Hollywood. Miss Pergain, a beautiful blonde, was formerly married to Prince Troubetskoy and occasionally doubled for some of our stars when she lived in Hollywood. A musician of more than ordinary ability, she was eager to study and complete her musical education. Just in case you haven't heard—Charles Farrell has taken up flying. Charlie, who is a frugal youth with more common sense than most of our stars, was about to buy a new car, but now his heart is set on an airplane. As for Virginia Valli she votes in favor of the car, but she is the sort of wife who wants Charlie to be happy, so I imagine the plane will win. Charlie's role in "Heartbreak" did it. He played an aviator.

A pleasant reward for Norman Taurog is the assignment to direct "The Miracle Man." "Skippy" recognized as not only the best picture of this year but of any year, won Mr Taurog the honor of the Motion Picture Academy. Naturally, Paramount realizes they have a young man who not only understands children but human nature. Robert Coogan will be in the cast. What a cunning mite he is and a good many people's favorite. While some of us think Jackie Cooper is the best child actor in the world there are many people who cast their vote for Bobby Cougan, and largely because of that baby voice of his.

Sukoenig Plays in Jordan Hall

By MOSES SMITH

Sukoenig played a piano program in Jordan Hall last night. It was the first Boston appearance of a young New Yorker of 25, who has had the advantage of excellent training and musical environment, and whose first name—not on the program—turns out to be Sidney.

Perhaps Mr. Sukoenig is the victim of his well wishers. At any rate we were not quite so impressed as the writers of the numerous and favorable advance notices, which the pianist has received in Europe as well as in New York. Discounting these while listening to an arduous program, one found a person of considerable musical talent and of the magic character-temperament; a man with technical facility and great power, both of which, however, he was inclined to abuse. For he often played too fast and too loud.

It is true that these things are usually matters of individual opinion. To be specific: then we liked the way he played the set movement of the Beethoven "Waldstein" Sonata, the heavy in his enunciation of the principal theme; while we disliked the playing of the earlier movements. We liked his playing of Stravinsky, Hindemith and Respighi (but not Ravel); while we thought his playing of Bach Scriabin and C. P. E. Bach was erratic.

And yet it is not inconsistent to predict something of a future for this young man—when he has harnessed his powers.

Hans Wiener Dances in Repertory Hall Nov. 24

Hans Wiener, Vienna dancer, makes his first Boston appearance of the season in Repertory Hall, Tuesday evening, November 24, with an entirely new program. He is to be assisted by Otto Ashmann, and for the first time by a group of Boston girls, Dorothy Wood of Wellesley, Elizabeth Halpern of Peabody, Estelle Rosedale of Boston, Dorothy Sammis of Brookline and Marjorie Heinzen of Waban.

Benefit Show Going Big

Boston is giving wholehearted response to an appeal for the midnight benefit shows to be on the program of 66 Boston theaters on Friday evening, Nov. 20, in aid of the unemployed. The committee is particularly pleased with the results thus far of the advance sale of tickets. Large blocks of tickets have already been disposed of, and volunteers from women's clubs, fraternal organizations, church societies, business executives, political organizations and other citizen groups have already responded to the appeal of the film industry to make this nation-wide benefit one of the most successful ever held.

James J. McGuinness

It is anticipated that the advance sale will exceed the actual attendance at the performances. Every cent raised goes to Mayor Curley's fund for the unemployed, and every service is volunteered. The complete cooperation of the press of labor unions of radio broadcasting companies and of motion pictures has exceeded the expectations of the local committees, who report an enthusiasm and co-operation that will undoubtedly provide the largest single contribution to date to the Boston welfare committee.

Regular current programs will be presented at midnight on Friday, Nov. 21 and the same admission prices will prevail as at regular evening performances. James J. McGuinness at 60 Scollay sq. will furnish information to additional volunteers.

Hearst Dividend For 1931 Already Earned

Dividend for the entire year of 1931 have been fully earned in the first three-quarters of this year and with a margin of $1.27 in excess of the necessary requirements for the 2,000,000 shares of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc. 7 per cent Class "A" cumulative preferred, which also has the right to participate in additional dividends up to 3 per cent, as declared.

Much significance is attached to the third quarterly report of Hearst Consolidated Publications, which was issued by executives of that organization, in that 1931 earnings are being maintained at the same pace as in the previous year, despite the greatly increased severity of the world wide depression. For the first three-quarters of 1931, Hearst Consolidated reports earnings equal to $3.02 a share against dividend requirements of $1.91, for that period, or more than $1.70 above the actual needs for the class "A" shares.

In the last five years net earnings have averaged annually three times dividend requirements.

Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., is composed of a powerful national group of newspaper enterprises including The American Weekly, with the world's largest circulation of over 5,500,000 subscribers, the New York Evening Journal, Chicago Evening American, San Francisco Call-Bulletin, Oakland Post-Enquirer, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Evening Herald, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Detroit Times, Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the American Newsprint Co.

During the comparatively short time since William Randolph Hearst first announced his offer for employe public participation in the shares of Hearst Consolidated Publications, more than 28,000 stockholders throughout the United States have taken advantage of the opportunity to acquire an interest in this investment.

IS OVERPRODUCTION OUR AILMENT?

By B. C. FORBES

"It has become too easy to produce things."

That has become the fixed belief of many business men.

Oil men tell you that the trouble with their industry is that it is now too easy to produce oil and gasoline. Motor manufacturers tell you that it has become too easy to make automobiles. Tire manufacturers voice the same complaint. Cotton manufacturers bewail the fact that there is far too much plant capacity. Rubber growers speak of gross overproduction.

Copper producers attribute their woes to the facility with which the red metal can now be abstracted from the ground. There is a super-abundance of silver, say producers. The steel industry attributes its depression to excess productive facilities. The public has been told that there are too many buildings, that there is too much sugar, too much lumber, too much coffee.

The world, it is bewailed, has been "afflicted" by too much wheat—that tractors and harvesting machinery have made it too easy for too many countries to raise abundant crops.

"Silly" Reasoning

Is such reasoning sound? Or is it silly?

It is silly—extremely silly.

What is mankind's objective on this earth?

What is—what should be—the material goal of the human race?

Our objective, our goal, surely is to provide human beings with a maximum amount of necessaries and comforts and luxuries and cultural facilities, and to provide them at the least possible amount of toil and sweat.

Money Making Overemphasized

Man's chief end is not—should not be—the accumulation of gold or silver or other possessions valueless in themselves.

One trouble besetting the world at this stage of its development is that mere money-making has been exalted above human service.

We are so inadequately civilized that we have not yet grasped the elementary, fundamental, supreme fact that the greatest good of the greatest number should be our guiding aim.

When we allow ourselves to think basically, to ponder the real meaning of life, to analyze calmly what it is all about, how utterly absurd becomes the complaint, "it has become too easy to produce things!"

Destruction of Crops Assailed

Is it not clear as crystal that the easier it becomes to supply every mortal with an abundance of the things which make for comfort, happiness, civilization, mental and spiritual growth, the better?

There is altogether too profound basis for complaining, not that it has become too easy to produce things, but that we have not yet learned how to make it possible for everybody to share adequately in the enjoyment of the useful, desirable things produced.

Think of shiploads of coffee being taken to sea and dumped overboard! Think of a supposedly sane United States governmental body, the Federal Farm Board, urging that one-third of this country's growing cotton crop be deliberately destroyed! It was seriously suggested that vast amounts of American wheat be destroyed!

It is enough to make the angels weep and the devil rejoice.

Chance to Cut Labor's Hours

Along what paths may the remedy, br remedies, be found for our modern economic ills, our economic dislocation, our economic lopsidedness?

Two thoughts instantly spring to mind. First, mankind's best brains must most earnestly seek to evolve ways and means to make it possible for so-called backward peoples to earn and acquire and consume a much larger measure of the things enjoyed by more advanced races.

Second, until widespread progress has been made in that direction, it would seem as if the forward-march of invention, the rapid multiplication of machinery, the improvement in transportation, the increasing mastery of mass production, all combine to make it feasible to cope with the world's present consumptive capacity without toiling as long hours as heretofore.

"Twaddle!" you may reply.

Only, don't reach and rivet that conclusion without giving the whole vast subject more and deeper thought than can be compressed into the moments you have devoted to reading this column

MARKET VIEWS NEW BUILDING OF BROKERS IS PLANNED

Whitney & Elwell—Some constructive announcement as to the foreign situation, particularly as regards Europe, would now be very welcome. It is up to France to lead Europe out of its morass, and too much delay is apt to prove to be dangerous.

Hornblower & Weeks — We would chance holding stocks during the first hour today in order to observe the character of resistance encountered around the lows of Wednesday. Failure of good resistance to develop at this point would indicate a reaction exceeding technical proportions.

Edward B. Smith & Co.—We think there is the possibility of a sufficient amount of favorable news in the offing to turn the market again toward higher levels.

Theodore Prince & Co.—We have as yet seen no evidence of any reversal of the upward trend.

Shields & Co.—Most of those following the rallies are in-and-out traders and there has been very little of the kind of investment that builds a real foundation for an advance.

Dividends

Long Bell Lumber Loss Is $3,296,003

Chicago, Nov. 13—Long Bell Lumber Corp. reports for nine months ended Sept. 30 net loss of $3,296,000 after depreciation, depletion interest and deduction of $400,000 for inventory adjustment as of June 30 against net loss of $1,299,810 in nine months of 1930. For quarter ended Sept. 30 net loss was $1,249,111, against net loss of $1,226,446 the preceding quarter and net loss of $658,589 the third quarter of 1930.

Lanston Monotype Machine Co declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50, placing the stock on a $6 annual basis, against $7 paid previously. Dividend is payable Nov. 30.

California Packing Co. omitted dividend due at this time. In the two preceding quarters 50 cents was paid, previous to which the stock was on a $4 annual basis.

J. & P. Coats Ltd., London, declared a quarterly dividend of 4½d, less tax, on the common

Hears:

That even though impatient liquidation, referred to yesterday, appeared in some sections and suddenly choked off the rally, the minor net change of industrials weighs against a bearish attitude. If it there is a decisive break through the 110 level, on volume, fast traders will continue to scalp on the long side.

Grains

Close followers of the grain market look for further reaction. Allowing for intermittent rallies, they think the cereals will have had ufficient correction when May wheat sells at 60 cents. This figure may be a little above the actual low mark as the top figure they gave us was a little under the actual high. If and when the setback occurs they feel confident that the price of May wheat will start toward 85 cents. The latter figure will probably prove to be the top for 1931 with the one dollar quotation postponed until some time in 1932.

The source of the rail information appearing in this space still believes that a good deal is due on rallies. The carriers are in the banks and this obviously means that at some later date bond financing will be in order. Such a step reduces the income applicable to common equities and, naturally, will retard the appreciation of former dividend rates.

Germany

News of German finances continues to creep into the headlines and it is expected that such dispatches will gradually work into a more important spot over the week end. England's failure to enact a tariff has for the moment saved the German trade balance. Steps taken to prevent the export of capital will bolster the internal currency situation. Despite these constructive happenings the opinion still prevails that much is to be done if Germany is to remain on a good basis. For this reason traders are disposed to give foreign issues precedence over domestic affairs.

Selling of Radio is said to be due more to tax selling situation than to demands made on it by the R. K. O. refinancing. Any lifting of this influence, expected soon, should be followed by a snapback, in the opinion of a retail broker.

Boardroom Briefs

Now that the war scare is dying out the chemicals are being called on to absorb a good bit of selling . . . Kennecott is expected to pay the present rate for one more quarter . . . Firmness of Air Reduction can be traced to the strength of U. S. Industrial Alcohol . . . That the market is more interested in earning power than in assets is proven in a compilation by Standard Statistics of a long list of shares selling below net working capital . . . The French wheat crop is said to be 60,000,000 bushels short of requirements .

The three indicators given here over a week ago remain the best guide to share prices. They are the bond and grain markets and the price of sterling.

Second Investors' Dividend Held Up

Second Investors Corporation investment trust, sponsored by Rodeil & Co., has reduced states' value of its issued capital stock from $2,241,000 to $813,000 for the purpose of establishing a surplus against which depreciation can be charged and dividends which have been earned may be paid on preferred stock New stated value of capital shares previously prior preferred, $25 per share; convertible preferred, $5, and common stock $1. Former values were: Prior preferred $50; preferred, $25 and common $5.

In view of the adjustment in capital no action will be taken on the preferred dividend due Dec. 1, but it is anticipated the dividend will be declared in the next quarter. The regular quarterly dividend on the prior preferred will be paid.

Socony-Vacuum to Have Ship Company

Socony-Vacuum Corporation has formed Standard Vacuum Transport Company to take over tanker fleets of old Standard Oil Company of New York and old Vacuum Oil Company. Consolidation of certain oil producing properties of two companies under Magnolia Petroleum Company is also being worked out. Plans are also being devised for consolidation of marketing divisions of two companies.

Baldwin October Bookings Decline

Baldwin Locomotive Works and affiliated companies report business booked in October amounted to 21,018,000, as compared with $2,104,000 in September and $1,467,000 in October, 1930.

Shipments in October totaled $1,655,000, as against $1,486,000 in the previous month and $4,368,000 in October a year ago.

Hollinger Mines Pays 5 Cents Extra

An extra dividend of 5 cents in addition to the regular monthly dividend of five cents was declared by directors of Hollinger Consolidated old Mines. Both dividends are payable December 3 to holders of record November 14.

RETAIL CHAINS LOOM LARGE IN U. S. BUSINESS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Retail chains loom large in United States business. These chains do 21¼ per cent of the total retail store business. It was disclosed by the Bureau of the Census today in a detailed report on the proportion of chain store operations in each business classification.

There are 7048 chain store organizations, operating 158,258 stores or units or about 10 per cent of all the stores in the country. Sales of these chains for the year 1929 which is the basis of the Census compilations, aggregate $10,771,981,-000, compared with total sales in all retail stores in the United States of $50,033,850,792

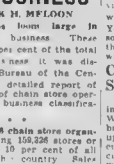
Benjamin H. Cram, the automotive authority, sees improvement for the industry in 1932.



Benj. H. Cram

"Employment for the industry is off from previous levels, but many plants are taking back men to work on a short time basis in preparation for assemblies of 1932 models. The industry's employment prospect for the winter is far an improved situation as compared to that existing in the winter of 1930 and 1931."

* * *

Copper shares are being cautiously accumulated on the hope that American and foreign producers may reach a friendly agreement favorable to the industry. The Belgians are reported having been blocking curtailment plans. The final weapon to aid American producers is understood to be by man to be re-establishment of a protective tariff.

President Harry C. Knight of Southern New England Telephone on the New England Council tells us:

"The American Machinist awards announced in Cleveland tonight for the most effective machinery modernization and replacement programs in the industrial plants of the country are convincing evidence of New England's real position in the field of industrial management. That both awards were won by New England proves that three of the additional six firms receiving honorable mention are operated wholly or partly in New England are facts that speak for themselves.

"It is especially gratifying to the New England Council that one of the winners, James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Co. of New Haven, is chairman of the Council's Industrial Committee."

Alabama Railway Declares Dividends

New York, Nov. 13 Alabama Great Southern Railway declared regular semi-annual dividend of $2 on both classes of stock. The common dividend is payable Dec. 30 and the preferred Feb. 13. Company had been paying semi-annual extra dividends of $1.50 on both classes of stock.

At the time last year the company declared a special dividend of $6 a share on both issues, thus passing on to stockholders the special dividend received from its subsidiary, the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railway. Southern Railway owns 196,611 shares or 56.1 per cent of the outstanding Alabama Great Southern stock

Wheeling Pays $7 Preferred Arrears

Directors of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway yesterday declared a back dividend of $7 on the 7 per cent prior lien stock for the period from August 1, 1925, to July 31, 1926. The dividend is payable November 20, to holders of record November 17.

Payment by Wheeling & Lake Erie of another $7 dividend on the prior lien stock on account of accumulations, means $606,351 in non-operating income for the New York Chicago & St Louis Railroad which holds trust certificates for 17,319 Wheeling prior lien shares.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

DECLINING volume of transactions indicates professional activity is currently accounting for the bulk of trading. Lincoln once advised against changing horses while crossing a stream and New York Central was reported sold by some on the idea that a change in the presidency might not be the wisest action

Copper Conference Success Hoped For

Success of the copper conference in New York is widely hoped for. Wall St heard a story widely broadcast that it would not break up without reaching some sort of curtailment agreement. But the cut in output of was reported. would be much less than had been hoped for at the commencement of the meeting.

Huge Advertising Is Planned by Motors

Automobile stocks display firmness. It is understood that enormous advertising will be undertaken by the leading motor concerns in an effort to step up business. Ford and General Motors particularly are reported planning huge expenditures on advertising.

Jersey Standard Is Displaying Strength

Standard Oil of New Jersey is strongly sponsored at present and maintained strength in it undoubtedly will encourage more bullish activities throughout the remainder of the group.

American Ice Has Favorable Report

One of the most favorable third quarter reports thus far released is that of the American Ice Co. Net earnings of $1,763,945, compare with $1,893,311 a year ago. On the 966,800 common shares outstanding Sept. 30, 1931, balance after preferred dividends was equal to $2.74 a share, against $2.78 a share on 600,000 shares a year ago.

Increased Profit for Kroger Likely

Present indications are that Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. for the current year will report net profit of between $1.50 and $2 a share on its 1,813,486 shares of common. This would compare with net of $2,168,247, or $1.15 a share, in 1930.

Speculative Interest in Northern Pacific

Increased speculative interest is being shown in Northern Pacific. Houses which have been prominent in rail shares in the past report that there has been buying of the stock by traders who are of the opinion that here is a good chance of the current $3 a share dividend being maintained at the meeting next month. They point out that the road could take a good-sized extra dividend from Northwestern Improvement Co., its wholly-owned subsidiary, which is in an exceptional strong financial position

Colorado Fuel's Discovery Important

Discovery of high-grade ore by Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. at its Sunrise, Wyo., properties is important to that company as the new linking of the Great Northern and Western Pacific System is to the two railroads. President Arthur Roeder of Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. stated.

Investment Buying in Beechnut Packing

A moderate amount of investment buying has been seen in Beechnut Packing on estimates that the company is likely to show earnings of around $5 a share in the current year. Recent prices have been only about 10 times those predicted revenues. There has been a renewal of rumors of a merger involving the company. Such reports have been heard on numerous occasions in the past two years, but they have always lacked foundation Beechnut is closely controlled and important holding in the company are understood to have remained intact during the general business depression.

Dominion Stores Sales Show Gain

Dominion Stores is one of the exceptions in this group so far as a trend of sales is concerned. There was an increase of 3.1 per cent in the total for the four weeks ended October 24 while from January 1 to October 24 the gain in sales amounted to 6.4 per cent. The good position of the company has been responsible for quite accumulation which has carried the stock forward in the past few weeks Part of the demand has been credited to Canadian interests close to the company.

Foreign Demand for U. S. Issues Gaining

Houses doing a large international business report a fairly heavy demand has sprung up recently for American shares based on the local exchange. A large part of this buying is said to represent covering by European investors who feel that the currency and gold crises in England was so acute. It is also stated that necessitous liquidation in this market for big foreign speculators has ceased entirely. In this connection, it is interesting that cables from abroad state English speculators have changed their attitude towards the American market since the end of the gold export movement.

INSURANCE

Worry Is Greatest Destructive Force Money Matters Cause Most Concern Quiet Retirement Is Sought by Many Annuities Are Found Attractive

—By Frank F. Loomis

Worry is the greatest destructive force that is holding the life span at 58 years. Medical science has freed us of most of the epidemic diseases, but has left the individual to fight his own battle against the premature destruction of his own body by emotions of worry.

Worry over what? What do men and women worry about that shortens their lives so materially? They worry over money matters. The money problems and accusations worry there is. Many men never reach old age because they worry themselves to death over not going to keep them during the later years of life, when they are too old to work

Hundreds of old men who have had bad luck with their investments are dependent on relatives or institutions because they did not take the trouble to make guaranteed provision for the after-60 years of age period. Sixty-five per cent of all men are dependent on others for their daily bread after that age. Most of that 65 per cent could easily have been sitting on easy street with $200 to $500 checks dropping in on the first of every month, if they had cared to.

Practically every man and woman would like to feel that some day they would be in a position to stop working . . . and still be independent, financially. Some have dreams of riches, travel, but the majority desire quiet retirement to enjoy life for the balance of their days.

How would you like to have five hundred dollars a month guaranteed you for as long as you live, as a check to you on the first day of every month? This can be done. Just call up the greatest beneficiary that the human race has ever known . . . the life insurance company. Any particular man or company . . . just any competent life underwriter, and ask him about an annuity.

Annuities are attractive because they combine absolute safety with satisfactory income. They are particularly suitable for people without dependents, who have passed middle life and who want a guaranteed income through their remaining years.

Men and women who find the income from their invested capital inadequate for their comfortable support, can usually profit by reinvesting their capital in a life annuity. By so doing they not only make sure provision for their entire remaining lifetime, but frequently materially increase their annual income.

For instance, take the case of a woman aged 65 years of age, with capital of $15,000. Invested in securities earning 5 per cent, her annual income is $750. But, if this capital were invested in a life annuity, she would be guaranteed an annual income of about $1441 for the rest of her life, and she would be freed from the responsibility and worry of watching her investments. A man of the same age, for the same amount of money, could secure an annuity of about $1620 guaranteed annually for life.

A man 60 years old, who purchases an annuity receives an income of over 9¼ per cent annually. A woman aged at age 65, the income is 10.8 per cent; at 70 years nearly 13 per cent and at 75 years over 15¾ per cent. The income for a woman is slightly lower, ranging from 8.3 per cent. If purchased at age 60, to 12.5 per cent if purchased at age 75 years.

If you are past 50 years of age and desire certain happiness and a sense of security for the rest of your life, you should learn the facts about annuities. There are various forms of annuity contracts, adapted to fit all requirements

An annuity, purchased by a single sum, as described above, is known as a Life Annuity, which is simply a contract with a life insurance company for the investment of a certain sum, the company guaranteeing a specific income each year for as long as the purchaser may live, the amount varying, of course as to the age of the purchaser at the time he buys the annuity.

You may also provide for an annuity by annual deposits for the payments which you wish to commence at a designated age, say 60 or 65 years. This contract is called a deferred annuity and is attractive to young men and women who wish to secure for themselves a guaranteed income in later years.

The main purpose of the annuity is to provide a guarantee of financial independence through life which is of vital importance to everyone, and according to experience, holders of annuities are singularly long-lived, undoubtedly due to the freedom from financial worries, which comes from the knowledge that they cannot outlive their income.

—SPECTATOR—

Says:

The pronounced unsettlement which developed in the rail group, and which influenced sympathetic selling elsewhere in the market, places more than average importance upon the results to be obtained at today's meeting of the Association of Rail way Executives.

Two Items

Two matters of utmost importance as regards the near term outlook for the carriers, are due to come up for discussion, namely the decision on the pooling arrangement brought up in the recent interstate commerce commission, and the outcome of the wage controversy.

The fact that selloss in the carriers proved of sufficient quality aggressive bullish activity in other sections of the list indicates that movements of the rail group still play a vital part as regards the trend of the market as a whole.

Radio

With Radio Corp. common stock currently quoted at approximately 10 per cent of its bull market peak it is perhaps interesting to try to find the true position of this once potent speculative leader.

One analysis of the stock points out that the sluggishness it has recently shown is due primarily to its top-heavy capitalization. Radio Corporation has outstanding $18,-779,870 of 7 per cent first preferred stock, 863,375 shares of $5 preferred A stock, and 15,160,750 shares of common

This capitalization is declared to be out of proportion to the size of the radio and phonograph business of the United States.

FINDS RISE IN GRAIN HELPS

Salina, Kans., Nov. 13—Nathan L. Jones, president, Western Power Light & Telephone Company, which operates principally in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri, today issued the following statement:

"Whether or not wheat prices advance further, there can be no question that the improvement occurring in the last three weeks has had a profound psychological effect. The wheat grower and the merchant alike in the southwest area served by the Western Power Light & Telephone Company are manifesting a decidedly better mental attitude.

"This actuality has assumed partial form. We have evidenced, for instance, a slight increase in rural telephone usage and are experiencing a moderate increase in household consumption of electricity. The further the wheat market advances, the greater the effect will be on the state of mind of the farmer and in turn the merchants dependent upon agricultural buying power.

"We know that the grower in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri has wheat he has carried for some time and this fact promises that the financial position of our sector of the country will improve as prices go up."

Trading Is Cautious on London Exchange

London, Nov. 13 (AP)—Cautious prices and narrow movements around yesterday's levels featured dealings on the stock exchange today pending developments in international affairs. There was a tendency toward hardening among industrials and Argentines.

Foreign exchanges favored London slightly. The dollar was quoted at 3.74, the franc at 96.34 and the guilder at 8.93½.

People's Gas Shows Gain in Total Assets

Statement of Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co. and subsidiaries shows total assets of $237,165,534 on September 30, 1931, as against $211,-070,586 on December 31 last.

PRICES DRIFT OFF IN WALL ST. TRADING

New York, Nov. 13—Prices drifted off in Wall Street trading today. The market stiffened after a sag in the railroad shares in the first few minutes of trading, but began to work lower later.

Industrials and utilities held up best. New York Central lost 1¾, then partially recovered. Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific and others lost a point or so, and Union Pacific over 2 points.

TRADING IS QUIET

U. S. Steel and American Telephone showed good resistance for a time. Trading was quiet.

The financial community was cheered by the $26,000,000 increase in money circulation during the past week. Although the drop was not large, it indicated, in the opinion of bankers, that the hoarding habit had been checked. The previous week saw a circulation rise of $63,000,000 due to seasonal influences.

Gold stocks gained for the second consecutive week; this and the circulation reduction point to a large measure to the $40,000,000 reduction in outstanding credit which has shrunk $174,000,000 in three weeks.

Brokerage houses were pleased by yesterday's steadiness in industrial stocks despite the sag in wheat and the ugly appearance of the cotton pits, which appeared to have been influenced by New York capitol.

That important carrier to give a dividend meeting scheduled for December 9 and in view of the downward revision in earnings estimates, Wall Street is wondering whether another cut will be made. Rail shares are expected to occupy a rather prominent market position while the freight rate and wage questions are hanging fire.

STERLING IS STEADY

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., is negotiating for sale of its Brunswick radio and record division to American Recording Corp., an operating unit of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.

This division has been the company's most costly subsidiary, showing an operating loss in the 1931 year ended Aug. 31, 1931, of $2,399,161, in addition to which a special inventory writedown of $1,000,000 was made. Brunswick was acquired in April, 1930, by payment of $11,820,000 in debentures and has shown a total loss of $8,000,000 since acquisition.

Buyers for retail establishments, attempting to protect themselves in event of rise on sterling silver products, have just placed orders for substantial quantities of both hollow and flat ware in the wholesale market. Most were for delivery after first of next month.

Silverware manufacturers now paying 49 to 51 cents an ounce more for bullion, have made no price advances, but they refuse to indicate what actions may be taken in next two weeks. Buyers feel increase is likely to come without warning.

Conflict between Japan and China in Manchuria has been the largest factor in providing jobs for 40,000 Lancashire mill workers and in putting 1,000,000 others on part time instead of part time. Chinese boycott has virtually stopped importation into China from Japan. Reports are that cotton sales have increased 100 per cent.

Mills running at 40,000 per cent capacity in August and September now are operating at 75 per cent or better. At least 20 mills are running again after being closed as much as four years.

Carpet Company's New Business Good

Good new business is reported today by the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company. Important contracts include one for all carpeting to be used in the S. S. St. John, 6000-ton vessel now building for the Eastern Steamship Lines and to be launched at Newport News Shipbuilding. Re-carpeting orders totaling 4562 yards have been received from Miami Biltmore Hotel and Roney Plaza. The Miami Biltmore was recently taken over by Henry L. Doherty and associates.

Youngstown Steel Demand Improves

Youngstown, O., Nov. 13—Slightly better demand for steel scrap have developed here this week due to greater activity in Mahoning Valley open-hearth furnaces. Gains of 50 cents a ton a week ago are firmly held on principal classifications, and sentiment is somewhat stronger.

Business Index Shows No Change

Preliminary index of general business activity in the week ended Nov. 7 was 67.8, showing no change from the revised index of 67.8 for the previous week, according to Business Week.

TIM TYLER'S FLYING LUCK

Uninvited Audience

By Lym Young

WE'LL LAND AT BASRA AND WHILE OUR PLANE IS BEING GASSED, OILED AND LOADED WITH FOOD SUPPLIES, WE'LL TAKE A RAMBLE THROUGH THE TOWN —
OLD? SAY, THIS BURG IS OVER 12 CENTURIES OLD, TIM! LET'S GO OVER AND SEE THE HOUSE WHERE SINBAD, THE SAILOR, LIVED! REMEMBER HIM IN "ARABIAN NIGHTS"?
AW - LET'S HUNT UP A GOOD FEED PLACE FIRST! I'M HUNGRY AGAIN.
I'M GOING INTO THIS SHOP AND SEE WHAT THEY'VE GOT TO SELL, IN THE WAY OF NOVELTIES. COMING?
NAW - TIM AN' I'LL WAIT OUTSIDE FOR YOU, JOY
SAY, TIM, WHILE WE'RE WAITIN' LET'S TAKE ANOTHER SQUINT AT THAT PHONY JEWEL YOU FOUND BACK IN ARABIA
SURE - BUT I WHAT WHO? IT'S HOT
PHONY SPUD!

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

(Copyright, 1931, for the Boston Evening American.)

Rev. Clinton Cox, of Chicago, announces that hereafter he will not insist on cash for performing a wedding ceremony, but will, instead, accept either—

Fourteen cans of spinach, or—
Six cans of peaches, or—
Nine cans of tomatoes.

Of course, it's nice to get rid of fourteen cans of spinach—but it might be better in the long run just to choke it down.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Aunt Bella:
I have an autograph album and my boy friend wrote in it,
"Roses are red,
Violets are blue;
I like Marlene Dietrich better than you."
I don't know what to think. —Girlie.

Ans.—Tell him about me, kiddo. —Aunt (America First) Bella.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

Due, perhaps, to unusual weather conditions throughout the United States, we have received one of the most significant pieces of verse it has been our good fortune to hitherto wield. Poignant, gripping, we print below, at your risk, a poem directly from the heart and indelible pencil of Filipino Poet Felizio Andrade:

PROSPERITY

What is it, this prosperity of what I hear of?
I know what means such dear word as Love;
I also realize whereby comes pretty words like Oh, Baby.
And moreover, too, that ladies say no which means maybe.
But all time I read in newspapers and hear on radio
About prosperity, which is surely very fine thing;
But everyone say, Oh, where? Oh, where?
And, please, I would be very thanks if somebody
To tell me what it means word Prosperity.

—Felizio Andrade.

"It Couldn't Happen Here" It Did—Are There More?

EDITH RILEY

IRENE PASNO

Edith Riley, aged 13, thin, wan, emaciated.

It happened in Washington.

She excites your pity. But Washington is SO FAR AWAY. "It could never happen in New England."

O, couldn't it!

She was found in a pitiable condition IN RUTLAND, VT.

A waif. Abandoned by her foster-sister.

Her eye was bruised. Her ear was torn. Her tender little body was marked by scars of cigarette burns. Her little body bore several wounds, probably inflicted by scissors.

Our hearts go out in sympathy for this child.

What about our laws?

We have the "Best" in the country. They were put onto the statute books by well-intentioned men and women.

Are there others?

Alfred E. Whitman of the Children's Aid Society informs us there is "a long list" of applicant children who would be placed in juvenile institutions for proper care "if the institutions were not overcrowded."

What care are these children getting?

Look about you. Keep your eyes open. If you see signs of neglect, report them.

Obey the injunction of the Great Nazarene:

Sweet, defenseless children were HIS first concern.

We want no more cases of Edith Rileys and Irene Pasnos.

They disgrace our so-called civilization.

Our Parking Bedlam

Parking laws in the city of Boston have descended from the point of being a common nuisance to the depth of being a common joke.

The court decision that even the perpetual parking violator can not be apprehended and prosecuted unless he is seen entering or leaving the car adds to the turmoil and confusion.

More than that, it kills the parking laws.

Can you imagine a policeman, with tag in his hand, waiting four hours in front of a parked car for its owner or driver to return! Boston would require more men than the United States Army to enforce such a law.

The car is the property of its registrant.

If he loans it, he should be compelled in equity to assume responsibility for the way it is handled by the person to whom he has confidence enough to loan his property.

It is so in the common law. It is so under the State system of compulsory automobile insurance.

Unless Boston, with its narrow streets and terrific congestion, devises some such method to free itself from defiant parkers who use the streets for a garage, it will be well-nigh impossible to transact business here.

What Do You Know?

Mark "True" or "False":

1. The Bois de Boulogne is in Vienna.
2. The Eiffel Tower is the highest in the world.
3. Sarah Bernhardt is buried in Westminster Abbey.
4. The Peace Treaty of the Great War was signed in Paris.
5. The present Pope has been in office since 1922.
6. The Egyptian Pyramids were built to commemorate wars.
7. An allegory is a war song.

1. False (Paris). 2. True. 3. False (Paris, Pere Lachaise Cemetery). 4. False (Versailles, near Paris). 5. True. 6. False (tombs for kings). 7. False (poem with symbolic characters in it).

I Was Boy Crazy

LITTLE MILLIE ADAMS is boy crazy.

Two years ago, Milly was a sweet, shy little girl in the last grade of grammar school. She was docile as a kitten . . . satisfied to play simple games with other little girls . . . still liked to fuss with her dolls.

Today she's an unruly young smarty in the second year of high. And the neighbors are beginning to say—

"If ever I saw the makings of a Bad Girl, it's that Wilson kid!"

And Milly certainly looks the part. In spite of her mother's efforts to dress her modestly, Milly smuggles lipstick and rouge to school—makes up like a young Indian. Won't work, either, at home or at school. Is lazy, dreamy, irritable—Won't mend her clothes. Leaves everything in a mess. Sasses back.

Sometimes, between outbursts, the old sweet Milly returns. For a few days, she'll be gentle and adorable—then off she'll go again, in dizzy circles. And always there's a boy on the horizon. She can't think of anything but boys. And Mom and Dad are frantic. They lecture her . . . tell her she should be ashamed of herself . . . but it doesn't do a particle of good. Right in the middle of a scolding, the telephone will ring, and she'll jump up with that furtive, excited look—

What IS to become of her? After all they've done to make her fine and good is she going to be one of these Wild Women? And what would I do with a girl like that?

What would I do with a Boy Crazy Girl? I'd remember when I was Boy Crazy myself! I'd turn my memory back through the years of my womanhood, back to the time when I was ten, then twelve, then fifteen, I'd remember the hazy-dazy dream world in which I lived as a child, shut in, awaiting my awakening, like a grub in a cocoon. A tiny, shy grub, curled up in Myself — knowing nothing whatever of Real Life.

The sense of something in my rushing on and on . . . reaching out and out . . . the sense of something going to happen—

Suddenly, something happening with earthquake violence . . . the bursting of the cocoon . . . the beginning of womanhood—

Realizing myself—my female self —for the first time—

Realizing boys for the first time—

Realizing Love—that most tremendous adventure—for the first time.

Stepping out into a world that was filled with the whispering and uproar of Eve. Growing dizzy and feverish with the wonder and delight of it all—growing shivery and cold with the fear of it all. Happy one day, hurt the next. Lazy, industrious, gentle, cruel, meek, proud, generous, stingy—being all these things in the course of one day, until my heart and head were whirling with the confusion of it all.

BEING ALL THESE THINGS BECAUSE LIFE WAS HAVING ITS WAY WITH ME . . . AND BECAUSE I HAD NO KNOWLEDGE OF HOW TO CONTROL LIFE.

And all the time being scolded and lectured and told to explain myself, when I hadn't the slightest notion what it was all about.

And Boys! Every nerve of me thrilling to Boys. The wonder of being with Boys . . . the shame of liking Boys! I loved them. I hated them. I ran from them—and to them! Boys, like a fever, possessed me. I couldn't rid myself of them. "Boy Crazy"—that's what they called me too, and the sneer of it cut like a lash. But how could I help this craziness which had come upon me? Why couldn't Grown-Ups trust me instead of hurting me so? Why couldn't they explain it to me quietly, with respect and friendship, instead of treating me like an outlaw? Why couldn't they understand?

If I had a Boy Crazy Girl what would I do? That's what I'd do. I'd remember when I was boy crazy myself. I'd remember how natural it all was, and how right—and how it finally led me to the beauty and deep joy of motherhood.

AND I'D TELL MY LITTLE GIRL ABOUT IT.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Thoughts while strolling: After all few can give trouble a toss like Mayor Walker. The burly-cues are curling. John Farrar grows stout. Harry Evans, who sees plays for Life. The gorgeously beautiful Freda Mierse of the Follies.

William Gaxton, a San Francisco boy, who made good in the city. What became of Daddy Browning? Ray Long's partner Richard Smith looks like a Harvard professor. Then there's that dog shop proprietress with many take for Neysa McMein. The pandemonium around Radio City. Bing, bing, bing.

The old philosopher who plaits and ribbons his hair. Straining against oblivion. A postman reads a postcard. A vivid blonde skips out of a taxi into a speak. A light lady's light moment, tra la. That sinister gang threat: "If you don't, it will be just too bad—."

Lindbergh sculped in potato salad in a delicatessen window. Wonder if Lew Fields and Joe Weber were estranged so many years. Or was it press agent talk? Nothing tickles me like an awkward puppy running sidewise. Adolph Zukor always reminds me of Eddie Brandstetter, Hollywood cafe owner.

A "Lady Named Lou" cabaret. The site of Fifth avenue's old Delmonico's. Memories? Lew Cody's apartment. Joe Fejer's impromptu violin recitals. Ben Ali Haggin dropping in, top-hatted, for a moment and staying until dawn. Jim Quirk and Allen Dwan debating. Al Bedell's collars.

Mustaches like Norman Kerry wears are coming back. Two girls who married titles now clerking on the avenue. Margaret Illington, born Maud Light, named herself in honor of her home town, Bloomington, Illinois. Black clouds gather. Like angry bees. Gang way for home!

Rube Goldberg did not have an overly pleasant stay in Hollywood recently. Discussing it he said he tried to work in a thin-walled hotel bungalow but couldn't concentrate. Said Rube: "All day and far into the night I was disturbed by gentlemen murmuring 'Yes' and ladies shouting 'NO.'"

* * *

Delivering orange juice with milk has bolstered up many sagging receipts of milk companies during the year. The heaviest sales are made in the bachelor apartments along the fashionable upper East Side. For, as Frances Williams chirps: "There's a lot of bad orange juice going around."

There are in Federal Reserve vaults down-town two billions in gold. Precautions for the safety of the enormous hoard are stupendous. Vaults are 85 feet below the street and 55 feet below sea level. Around the mighty cache is a narrow corridor protected by eight-foot thick walls of solid steel. The sole entrance is a 90-ton door which may be opened only by two men working separate combinations. No living person knows both. Employes have a food supply that would last two months in case of a siege and a delicate alarm contraption brings 500 soldiers, with machine guns, from Governor's Island in 20 minutes. Master minds of the safecracking world have for years worked and dreamed of some way to loot this prize, but to no avail. Recently they are reputed to have given up. It is regarded as utterly impossible. To get at the gold would necessitate destruction of the entire lower island.

New York's Italian section clusters around what is called the Minetas—Minetta lane, Minetta st. and Minetta pl. It is a district hard by Chatham sq. and Chinatown and was originally named "Mintje Kill" — Little Brook — by the pioneer Dutch. Plans are now being discussed to turn its twisting streets and slum tenements into sweeping boulevards and modern apartments. We hope it will not sweep away that rare culinary cluster on Mulberry known as Moneta's.

Lisle Bell says he never goes to cocktail parties because he always meets there the sort of people who go to cocktail parties.

Just Folks

Success

One rose is not enough to make
The plant worth string and garden stake,
Unless its blossom, fragrant sweet
The bush is able to repeat.
The gardener, beyond a doubt,
Will very shortly root it out.

Cut off its loveliest bloom, and then
The rose will start to bud again.
Content will nature never stay
With triumphs of some yesterday,
But to the last she'll struggle on
To better what has come and gone.

One touch of triumph dearly won
But marks the deed a man has done;
And if content with that he stays
To settle back, puffed big with praise,
The Gardener Life will cut him down
As one not worthy his renown.

Each high achievement merely leads
The true man out to greater deeds.
Who sits content with yesterday
Tomorrow will be failure's prey.
For he who would hold triumph fast,
Must live life bravely to the last.

Brandeis—Liberal, Fighter

He Has Earned "Many Happy Returns"

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS

Those "happy returns" will be the realization of a life well spent in devoted service to the people of his country.

We know Louis D. Brandeis best here in Boston. Here his career began and blossomed. Here the people derived the most intimate benefits from his fine courage and rare ability. Those benefits still flourish.

We recall how Brandeis penetrated and exposed the brazen scheme of Wall Street to pilfer and emasculate our fine old railroads, the Boston and Maine and the New Haven.

If Brandeis were with us now he would again be in the forefront of battle.

Because the same fight is on again. The same predatory financial interests have seen how the Boston and Maine and the New Haven have been rebuilt and fattened by the patronage of New England. They regard them as fat milch cows in the field, contentedly waiting for shrewd speculators to come in and drain off the cream, leaving the thin residue of skimmed milk to the people of New England again.

Brandeis gave to us the Massachusetts system of Savings Bank Life Insurance, the cheapest form of insurance known to the world.

On his birthday, he should receive expressions of gratitude and compliment from every class and group of people in New England.

It was for the prestige and independence of New England he contested against the alien financial influences that exploited her railroads.

It was for the shippers, travelers, employes and investors of the railroads he fought, many of them widows, orphans and charitable institutions whose investments and endowments for life were being ruined by the outside exploiters.

Along with them he should receive messages of gratitude from the many thousands of men, women and children who can look forward to the security and comfort which Savings Bank Life Insurance has assured them.

He should receive the compliments of the country as a whole, because he has been a distinguished, liberal Justice of the United States Supreme Court, with his courage and his intellect devoted to the great masses of the people who have most needed a firm, reliant defender.

May he live long! There have been so few independents like him in our day!

Cowardice and Economy

Curley's Wise Words on National Defense

Mayor Curley found himself in good company when in his Armistice Day speech he declared that the schemes to weaken the United States Navy are nothing less than "national cowardice masquerading under the guise of economy."

For, on other public rostrums, General John J. Pershing was declaring that our unpreparedness is an open invitation to agressor nations to make war upon us, and Mr. Henry L. Stevens, Jr., National Commander of the American Legion, declared that the Navy is being reduced to the "danger point."

And here in Boston, Senator Pat Harrison asserted that the scheme of debt cancellation is an unpatriotic violation of the interests of the American people and taxpayers.

With European nations torn by discords and rivalries and with the great Oriental nations engaged in actual war, Mayor Curley declared it is the height of folly and stupidity to be reducing the already small Army, to be impairing the already small Navy and to be relegating the Marine Corps to the status of a corporal's guard.

We are a Nation of fine traditions with a reverend regard for our history.

Yet we are being led by an Administration which proposes to close the oldest naval station in the country and which cannot afford the few pennies to maintain "Old Ironsides" as a national shrine.

Mayor Curley did well to call this silly, inane and unpatriotic paradox to the attention of the people on Armistice Day.

He crystallized the thoughts which are uppermost in the minds of loyal citizens concerned in the welfare of their country.
